GOP delegate search moves west

By The Associated Press

Ronald Reagan campaigned on Saturday in Montana and Idaho for more Republican convention delegates, while President Ford moved over the 1,000-delegate mark with support from Minnesota Republicans.

Reagan picked up all four Idaho delegates chosen Saturday and was expected to do well in Montana and New Mexico where a total of 41 delegates were being seleced this weekend.

Ford has a total of 1,001 delegates, according to The Associated Press tally. That's 129 short of the number needed to win the GOP presidential nomination, with only 139 delegates yet to be chosen. Reagan has 933 delegates, and there are 184 uncommitted delegates.

Ford had passed the 1,000 mark a week ago, but his total dropped below the 1,000 when some delgates previously numbered among his supporters declared themselves uncommitted.

In Montana, where bitter disputes have developed between Ford and Reagan factions over how they would divide the delegation, 20 delegates were at stake.

And 21 delegates were being chosen in New Mexico, with Reagan expected to get most or all of them.

Reagan won all four at-large delegates chosen Saturday in Idaho, giving him 17 of that state's 21 delegates. The other four support Ford.

Reagan addressed the Montana convention at Helena on Saturday and then flew to Moscow, Idaho.

Ford flew from Washington to Puerto Rico on Saturday for a six-nation conference on global economic problems. First Lady Betty Ford stood in for him at the Minnesota convention and Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe was to represent him in Montana.

Reagan held a series of private meetings Friday night at the Montana convention as he campaigned in hopes of winning the state's entire delegation.

"That's the name of the game," Reagan said on his arrival at the Helena airport when asked if he wanted all 20 delegates.

Told that Montana GOP Chairman Florence Haegen wanted the state's delegation split at 13 for Reagan and 7 for Ford, Reagan replied: "I don't think there is any need for any divisiveness."

The split proposed by Mrs. Haegen and Ford backers was in line with the results of Montana's June 1 nonbinding presidential preference primary, which went 65 per cent for Reagan and 35 per cent for Ford.

Had Reagan forces known at primary time that Mrs. Haegen planned to recommend an apportioned vote, they would have beefed up their campaign in Montana, said John Sears, Reagan's national campaign manager.

Ford supporters in Montana claimed the state party could be torn apart unless delegates are apportioned to both Ford and Reagan. Supporters of the former California governor made the same comments in Minnesota when Ford's campaigners got the convention to adopt a rule that guaranteed Ford almost all of the delegates there.

Democratic frontrunner Jimmy Carter, already holding enough delegates to gain the nomination, accordng to The AP survey, gained more on Saturday in North Dakota.

North Dakota's Democratic state convention confirmed its choice of delegates and 11 of the 13 were pledged to Carter. The remaining two said they would remain uncommitted.

Four more Colorado delegates were chosen Saturday. Carter got two, while California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall each got one. Colorado will send a total of 35 delegates to the national convention, 12 of them Carter supporters. The rest are splintered among various candidates.

Carter has a total of 1,539 delegates, according to The AP tally, 34 more than needed to win the nomination.

Ford in San Juan for economic summit talks

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — President Ford said Saturday he hopes the seven-nation economic summit conference opening here Sunday "will give a new impetus to the growth of our worldwide economy and improve international cooperation."

Ford also warned against outside intervention in the affairs of Puerto Rico following a promise of demonstrations by proindependence groups.

Aides said he was clearly referring to Cuba, although he did not name it. Ford said interference in the "freely determined relations" between the United States and Puerto Rico "will be an unfriendly act which will be resisted by appropriate means."

Ford read his statement after being welcomed by an honor guard, a 21-gun salute and the playing of anthems at San Juan International Airport. He was the first summit participant to arrive.

The leaders of Britain, Japan, Italy and West Germany were scheduled to arrive later Saturday.

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada had planned to come Saturday but delayed his trip until Sunday to deal with the air traffic control dispute that has closed most Canadian airports for a week.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France also is to arrive Sunday, shortly before the two-day conference opens at the plush Dorado Beach Hotel complex 17 miles west of San Juan.

After the island's few independence groups promised demonstrations, White House officials decided to transport reporters from San Juan to the meeting site by helicopter rather than bus, as earlier planned. Ford also flew to Dorado Beach by helicopter, as had been planned.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said, "Nothing is anticipated beyond peaceful demonstrations."

Also scheduled to attend the summit for the United States are Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Treasury Secretary William E. Simon.

Ford called the summit to discuss a common approach by the world's major industrial powers to problems of recovering from recession and to negotiations later this year with poor nations.

But an administration official said the agenda was left purposefully "loose" so a broad range of subjects could be discussed.

Sources have said topics certainly would include the special problems of Italy and Britain, with the United States urging in particular that they take stronger steps to slow the high inflation rates that are making the lira and the pound sterling lose value.

Jury trial against 3 may be 1st held in Matthews

MATTHEWS— A jury trial in police court – thought to be the first held in the city -- is set for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday on unlawful assembly charges against three young men who claim the charge is unconstitutional.

Trial dates are pending against three others, one charged with unlawful assembly, one with unlawful assembly and peace disturbance and a third accused of peace disturbance.

City marshall Don Spradling issued the tickets on June 18 after a chain of incidents that started about 8:30 p.m. on June 17 and continued until a subsequent confrontation with some of the men which occurred on the city's streets after midnight.

Spradling stated the citations for unlawful assembly were made by authority of city ordinance four, section two, in which it is unlawful for three or more people to gather to wilfully destroy city property or disturb the peace and tranquility of the town. The peace disturbance violation is provided in section four of the ordinance, Spradling said.

Those cited and asking for a jury trial, claim the charges are illegal and violate their constitutional rights of free assembly.

Pleading not guilty last Tuesday night in city court to a charge of unlawful assembly were Larry Grimes, Reggie Vandiver, Scotty Bewley, Sidney Schuerenberg and Robert Carlisle.

Police Judge Fred Story set $100 bonds each for Grimes and Carlisle and $50 bonds each for the others.

Grimes, Vandiver and Bewley are scheduled for jury trial Tuesday night. A date has not been set for a trial of Schuerenberg or Carlisle. Carlisle also pleaded not guilty to an additional charge of peace disturbance.

Vernon Bledsoe, charged with peace disturbance, pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial. He posted $100 bond and a trial date is pending.

One juvenile cited for unlawful assembly was given a summons to appear last Wednesday before the New Madrid County juvenile officer.

Two more young men, Melvin Barnett and James Lathum, pleaded guilty to unlawful assembly charges and were each fined $65 plus $10 costs and a 10-day jail sentence to be suspended upon payment of the fine and costs. Both paid their fines.

Symington holds lead over Hearnes, Litton

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rep. James W. Symington holds a strong lead over fellow Congressman Jerry Litton and former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes in a statewide survey on the Democratic primary for the U.S. Senate.

The Kansas City Star outlined the results this morning in a copyright story, citing a telephone poll which Research Information Center, Inc. of Phoenix did for the newspaper.

Symington, son of retiring Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., was the choice of 31.4 per cent of the 508 registered voters who said they intended to vote in the Aug. 3 Democratic primary.

Hearnes was second in the sampling, with 19.5 per cent, followed by Litton with 18.7. Kansas City Mayor Charles B. Wheeler Jr. had 1.8 per cent of the vote and 28 per cent were undecided. Six minor candidates on the ballot drew .6 per cent.

The poll was taken last Monday through Wednesday.

Regionalism was apparent in a breakdown of the voting.

Litton, completing his second term in the U.S. House from northwest Missouri's 6th District, drew 37.2 per cent of the vote from Kansas City, with Hearnes getting 12.1 per cent and Symington 28.7. Wheeler received 4.2 per cent.

But in St. Louis and St. Louis County, home ground for both Symington and Hearnes, they received 44.1 per cent and 17.6 per cent respectively. Litton got only 7.1 per cent and Wheeler 1.0 per cent there.

Fewer lawyers in public office is Petty's goal

Lawrence "Red" Petty

Running on a platform of reducing the number of lawyers in government, and cracking down on corruption, Lawrence "Red" Petty, 57, of Overland, Mo., is making a campaign swing through Southeast Missouri in his bid for the U.S. Senate.

"The trouble in our country is not with Democrats or Republicans," Petty says, "it's the lawyers that are dragging us down."

Petty, who has been a carpenter for 30 years, is campaigning as an independent, and says he is limiting his campaign expenditures to $2,000.

Petty also cites corporate and political payoffs as a major source of trouble in the country, and passes out copies of newspaper accounts of various Missouri legislators and governmental leaders receiving illegal campaign contributions from milk lobbies and major oil companies.

Calling for the working people of the state and nation to "rise up and vote in the kind of government that will truly represent them, made up of representatives who know what it is to work," Petty says the voters must fight corruption or accept the destruction of the country.

Symington, son of retiring Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., was the choice of 31.4 per cent of the 508 registered voters who said they intended to vote in the Aug. 3 Democratic primary.

Hearnes was second in the sampling, with 19.5 per cent, followed by Litton with 18.7. Kansas City Mayor Charles B. Wheeler Jr. had 1.8 per cent of the vote and 28 per cent were undecided. Six minor candidates on the ballot drew .6 per cent.

The poll was taken last Monday through Wednesday.

Regionalism was apparent in a breakdown of the voting.

Litton, completing his second term in the U.S. House from northwest Missouri's 6th District, drew 37.2 per cent of the vote from Kansas City, with Hearnes getting 12.1 per cent and Symington 28.7. Wheeler received 4.2 per cent.

But in St. Louis and St. Louis County, home ground for both Symington and Hearnes, they received 44.1 per cent and 17.6 per cent respectively. Litton got only 7.1 per cent and Wheeler 1.0 per cent there.

3 thefts in New Madrid

NEW MADRID— Two house burglaries and the theft of an outboard motor in separate incidents were reported Saturday by the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department.

Sometime Wednesday night or Thursday morning burglars entered an unoccupied house in Kewanee belonging to estate of the late Gertrude Carr. Items reported stolen were two table lamps, some pots and pans, two chairs, an electric mixer and other household furnishings.

A back door glass had been broken to enter the house.

The Mark Sutton home, Matthews Route One, was discovered broken into about 5:30 p.m. Friday. A 357 magnum pistol and a citizens band base station radio were taken.

A new 1976 nine-horsepower outboard motor valued at $600 was stolen off of a boat while parked in the yard of the Ralph Dixon home on Cypress Street in Marston. Dixon told officers the motor was on the boat when he left for work Friday morning and was gone when he returned that afternoon.

Fewer lawyers in public office is Petty's goal

Lawrence "Red" Petty

Running on a platform of reducing the number of lawyers in government, and cracking down on corruption, Lawrence "Red" Petty, 57, of Overland, Mo., is making a campaign swing through Southeast Missouri in his bid for the U.S. Senate.

"The trouble in our country is not with Democrats or Republicans," Petty says, "it's the lawyers that are dragging us down."

Petty, who has been a carpenter for 30 years, is campaigning as an independent, and says he is limiting his campaign expenditures to $2,000.

Petty also cites corporate and political payoffs as a major source of trouble in the country, and passes out copies of newspaper accounts of various Missouri legislators and governmental leaders receiving illegal campaign contributions from milk lobbies and major oil companies.

Calling for the working people of the state and nation to "rise up and vote in the kind of government that will truly represent them, made up of representatives who know what it is to work," Petty says the voters must fight corruption or accept the destruction of the country.

TV, CB, stereo stolen

A color television, stereo, citizens band radio and a CB radio antenna have been reported stolen, police said Saturday.

The television, valued at $416, and a stereo valued at $260 were reported stolen in the break-in of the home of Rachel Sue Burnett, 410 Kendall St.

The break-in was reported by Miss Burnett's mother who noticed that an air-conditioner had been pushed into the house to gain entry.

A neighbor told officers that she heard men talking around midnight Friday but did not get up to look because people often walk through her yard.

Police were called to the C. D. Walker residence, 801 Cambridge Drive, where a citizens band radio antenna valued at $24 was reported missing off an automobile parked at the residence.

Bruce Walker told police that he believed that the antenna had been missing since a swimming party he attended on Monday.

A citizens band radio valued at $300 was removed from a pick-up owned by John D. Litchford, 605 S. Frisco St. while it was parked at the Sands Lounge on West Malone Avenue between 10 p.m. Friday and 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

Bicentennial project puts town in debt

By Paul Grosswiler
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — While the Spirit of '76 takes hold across the land, one small Missouri town is working to pay a $5,000 debt incurred because it tried to celebrate the Bicentennial.

The debt is a small, white pine cabin in Clark where memorabilia of General Omar Bradley is displayed. Clark is Bradley's home town.

Clark's Bicentennial committee borrowed $7,000 from a Sturgeon bank to build the cabin, thinking they would receive a $2,500 to $5,000 matching grant from the state Bicentennial commission.

But the cabin will not be paid for by the state commission. All the federal Bicentennial money has been spent.

In total, about $300,000 was granted to 60 to 70 projects in the state.

Clark's Bicentennial committee chairperson Ruth Colley, treasurer Edgar Lewis and Mayor Ward Truesdell say that the commission's executive director, Kenneth White, told them at a meeting in April 1975 that getting matching funds for the Bradley museum would not be a problem.

"I walked out the door that night swearing we could get $2,500 at the snap of our fingers," Truesdell says.

But White says they somehow got the wrong impression.

At the meeting he encouraged them to apply to be one of the state's Bicentennial communities. He says he made them aware of the grant program, which is not the same as the Bicentennial community program.

"I in no way promised anything," White says. "A lot of people in Clark tied together the Bicentennial community and the grant application. They aren't tied together at all."

With what they thought was a promise for funds, Colley and Lewis took out the bank loan and brought in logs to build the cabin on land donated by Lewis. Articles such as Bradley's briefcase, a military dress cap and flags were put into the cabin, Colley says.

During the summer of 1975 a flag raising for the cabin was held.

The catch, as Clark citizens found out in March this year, was that federal Bicentennial money cannot be granted to projects already completed and paid for.

Lewis wonders why the commission or its staff did not tell them this earlier. William Parrish, commission chairman, and Mrs. Sallie Hailey, commission member, were at the flag raising, he says.

Lewis says they went ahead with the cabin with the thought that the sooner they built it, the better. "Nobody told us we were going ahead too fast," he says.

Parrish says that he did not assume at the time of the flag raising that the project would be funded. And White says he did not know the cabin was being built until after it was finished.

But the Clark committee did not give up so easily.

After being rejected for funding in March, they met with White, Parrish and several state legislators to review the project.

But in April the commission closed the case, finding it impossible to fund the Bradley museum.

With the cabin completed, even if the state commission had approved funding for the project it still would not have cleared national approval, Parrish says.

White says that many communities have been disappointed in fund requests and that most groups who asked for money were turned down. The problem was there were so many more requests than money to fund them, White says.

"We've never had a Bicentennial before, so we've learned as we went along," White says.

Colley, Lewis and Truesdell also are trying to learn as they go along — how to pay off their loan.

They have organized fund-raisers such as a ham and beans dinner and a basketball game to pay back $1,000, Colley says. And $700 is in the bank.

But Colley is skeptical. "In a town the size of Clark, with a population of 271, it's hard to make any headway," she says.

The committee is hoping for donations to help pay the loan.

The feelings in Clark toward the state Bicentennial commission are less than patriotic, but the town still wants to show that Clark was Bradley's home.

Last week a fence was put around the cabin and flowers were planted. All the time and materials were donated by Clark citizens.

"The whole thing with me is we have a man here who has been very famous," Truesdell says. "I talked to the Pentagon and the general's chief aid has been in on it. It looks bad to me when you've got a man of this much fame and can't get the state or federal government to spend one iota."

Three of the four sectional winners in the National Hockey League last season scored 113 points during the 80-game schedule. In the NHL, a win brings two points, a tie one point.

Arthur Ashe upset at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis knocked out defending champion Arthur Ashe in the biggest upset of the Wimbledon tennis tournament Saturday and led a four-man American charge into the quarter-finals.

Gerulaitis, 21, of New York, came from behind for a 4-6, 8-9, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 victory. He had never previously survived the first round at Wimbledon.

The other Americans in the quarter-finals are Jimmy Connors, Roscoe Tanner and Charlie Pasarell.

Ashe had been struggling all week to find his 1975 form. The last time a defending champion failed to make the quarters was in 1970, when Rod Laver went out in the fourth round.

The heat wave intense, with the temperature reaching 106 degrees in the sun-baked bowl of the center court. Ashe, looking weary and disspirited after his defeat, said he was a victim of the heat and tension.

As Ashe's game drooped in the hot sun, his opponent's punishing forehands became stronger. Gerulaitis ended the match with a series of devastating forehand returns to break Ashe's service for the last time.

"Those forehands of his were unbelievable," Ashe said. "I got three good first services in, yet I trailed 15-40."

Gerulaitis said Ashe was aiming at his forehand, which had been his weakness earlier in the match.

"In that last game he served wide to my forehand," Gerulaitis said. "I guessed what he was going to do, and I guessed right each time."

Connors destroyed Stan Smith, the 1972 champion from Sea Pines, S.C., 6-4, 6-1, 6-3. Nastase eliminated Onny Parun of New Zealand 7-5, 6-4, 6-3.

Smith could make no impression against Connors' serveand-volley game. The supercharged left-hander lost only four points on his service in the first set, and only three in the second. In a one-sided second set, after Smith had taken a 1-0 lead, Connors yielded only five points in winning six straight games.

Tanner, the cannonball server from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., thundered to a 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 triumph over Nikki Pilic, Yugoslavian left-hander. The American did not lose a service game.

Pasarell, of Puerto Rico, pulled off another marathon come-from-behind victory. After trailing by two sets, he came back and defeated Phil Dent of Australia 2-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0, 7-5.

In the previous round, Pasarell did the same thing, recovering from two sets down and overcoming Italy's Adriano Panatta.

Bjorn Borg, despite a groin injury, hit top form in demolishing Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-2, 6-2, 7-5. Earlier in the day, the Swede asked for the match to be postponed and even talked of pulling out if he did not get his way. He decided to play after a doctor had examined him.

Meanwhile, Raul Ramirez of Mexico beat bearded Bernie Mitton of South Africa 9-8, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1 and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina ousted the last Australian hope, Tony Roche, 6-4, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

In the quarter-finals, it will be: Gerulaitis vs. Ramirez, Nastase vs. Pasarell, Vilas vs. Borg, and Tanner vs. Connors.

Marise Kruger, 17-year-old South African starlet, led Britain's Virginia Wade 5-2 in the final set and was within range of creating the sensation of the day in the women's singles. But the hard-hitting English player rallied to win 2-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Title favorite Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., defeated Betty Stove of The Netherlands 6-2, 6-2. It was a comparatively hard match for the American, who previously had lost only three games in three rounds.

Three-time champion Maria Bueno of Brazil, now 36, made a sentimental return to the center court after an absence of eight years. She showed much of her old-time grace and magic before Sue Barker of Britain beat her 2-6, 6-2, 6-1.

In the women's quarter-finals, it will be: Miss Evert vs. Olga Morozova, Soviet Union; Martina Mavratilova, Czechoslovakia, vs. Miss Barker; Kerry Reid, Australia, vs. Mrs. Wade, and Rosie Casals, San Francisco, vs. Evonne Goolagong, Australia.

Billed as the World Martial Arts Championship, it was neither martial nor artistic. In what could only be described as a 45- minute yawn, Ali landed precisely two blows to the head of his opponent, Antonio Inoki.

Many in the audience of 14,000 who paid from $17 dollars to $1,000 to watch this dubious exhibition of inaction thought, all things considered, that Ineki, a lantern- jawed gentleman who took the initiative in his curious way throughout, had won.

Ali insisted, however, that he had been on the offensive, a fact less than visible to those in the crowd unless he meant his behavior, which in most ways was offensive in the extreme toward his foe.

Wise cracks, abuse. expletives, derisive hula dancing, nose thumbing and occasional recourse to sticking his tongue out failed to lure the honorable Inoki within range of Ali's four- ounce gloves.

The American referee called it a draw, to the wrestler and the wrestling judge thought it went to Ali.

Ali is to receive $6.1 million for his part in the proceedings and Inoki up to $4 million, most of the money coming from closed circuit television showings in the United States.

Besides the two punches Ali landed to Inoki's head, neither enough to stun nor floor him, the only other action in the 45-minute mismatch was when Inoki rushed Ali or knocked him to the mat with leg sweeps.

A newsman in a philosophical mood asked Ali what thoughts he had while he lay on the floor, on one occasion being sat on heavily.

"I was just letting time go by," replied Ali with a solemn face, "while I collect my $6 million."

The whole experience appeared to have left the usually voluble Ali in a less than cheerful mood. After briefly answering question in his dressing room in a voice which could hardly be heard, he announced, "I want to be alone."

He said he hadn't been hurt except for some bruises on his legs from the persistent sideswipes of his opponent. The money obviously hadn't hurt either since, according to referee Gene LeBell, Ali plans to confront another wrestler, Bruno Sanmartino, in New York after fights with Ken Norton and George Foreman.

Inoki told newsmen afterward he wasn't happy with the rules which prohibited him from tackling, using karate chops or punching on the mat. He admitted candidly that he had kept his distance to avoid the lethal sting of Ali's punches.

Inoki was silent when asked whether he would like a rematch.

The contest did nothing to prove whether a boxer could beat a wrestler, or the other way around. It was a little like trying to count bananas and oranges; they just aren't the same.

Tyson's fly helps Cards nip Phils

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Tyson's sacrifice fly scored the winning run in the 10th inning as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Saturday night.

Al Hrabosky, 5-5, pitched three scoreless innings in relief of Cardinal starter Bob Forsch to pick up the victory. Tug McGraw, 4-4, who took over in the eighth for Tom Underwood, was the loser.

Joe Ferguson doubled to start the 10th. Mike Anderson then sacrificed Ferguson to third. Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark then ordered Hector Cruz, a .210 hitter, intentionally walked to pitch to Tyson, batting .280, and Tyson foiled the move by hitting a fly to Greg Luzinski.

The Phillies, hitless for three innings, took a 2-0 lead in the fourth. Mike Schmidt doubled and rode home on Luzinski's double. Dick Allen sent Luzinski to third with a single and he scored when Forsch threw wildly trying to get Allen streaking for second.

Underwood, who was in trouble in every inning but the second and third, gave up two runs in the seventh. Jerry Mumphry led off with a double and scored on a single by Bake McBride on a ball that bounced over Dave Cash's head. Ted Simmons then doubled home the tying run.

Underwood pitched seven innings, giving up eight hits, striking out five and walking four. Forsch also worked seven, allowing the hard-hitting Phillies but five hits, striking out three and walking two.

Finley threatens suspension if A's players go on strike

AP Sports Writer

Embattled Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley, who steadfastly has refused to use three of his star players and now finds the other 22 threatening to strike, said Saturday:

"If they do strike, I just may go along and let them strike. Don't be surprised if there isn't any ball game in Oakland tomorrow (Sunday)."

Oakland owner Charles O. Finley ordered A's Manager Chuck Tanner not to play Vida Blue, Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi Saturday, setting up a dramatic confrontation with the rest of his players who have threatened to strike on Sunday.

"If they do strike, I just may go along and let them strike," Finley told San Francisco radio station KGO. "Don't be surprised if there isn't any ball game in Oakland tomorrow."

Finley, in Chicago, was in constant contact with Tanner, at Oakland, before Saturday's game, with the manager awaiting word from Finley whether he could insert outfielder-first baseman Rudi into the starting lineup.

Minutes before game time, Finley told Tanner to keep the three players out of the game, then asked to speak to Jim Todd, Oakland's player represenative.

Todd said Finley told him: "The gates will be open tomorrow. We will play a game at 1:30. And you people are welcome to participate."

On Friday night, Finley had threatened to suspend all his striking players and replace them with members of the Tuscon Toros of the Pacific Coast League.

But he quickly changed his mind on Saturday, telling San Francisco radio station KGO: "I have decided against bringing up a farm league team tomorrow."

Finley's reversal may stem from the following developments Saturday in this bizarre episode that now rivals an afternoon soap opera for daily disasters.

—Finley was informed by American League President Lee MacPhail that the league would not approve any suspension of Finley's striking players. That puts the squeeze on Finley, who can't elevate minor leaguers to the 25-man roster if he can't get league approval to suspend his major leaguers.

—Art Teece, owner of the Salt Lake City Gulls of the Pacific Coast League, threatened to take legal action if Finley pulled the Toros out of Saturday night's game with the Gulls. But Teece later said the game, a charity affair for the blind with a sellout crowd of 10,000 expected, would be played because Finley had changed his plans.

Dick Moss, general counsel for the Major League Baseball Players Association, Saturday sent the following notice to Finley.

"This telegram is being sent on behalf of players Vida Blue, Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi. Your refusal to permit the players to participate in championship games constitutes a default under their Uniform Player Contracts. Notice is hereby given, pursuant to Paragraph 7 (a), of the default and termination of said contracts.

"The act of not playing is the same as breaching a contract for improper payment," Moss said.

Finley now has 10 days to rectify the situation. If he doesn't, the players become free agents, Moss said.

In 1974, Catfish Hunter became a free agent after an arbitrator ruled that Finley violated 7 (a) by not paying Hunter in the stipulated manner.

By a 2-1 decision, Finley's appeal to have Hunter returned to the A's was struck down by the California Court of Appeals on Friday. Finley said he will appeal to the California Supreme Court.

"I am confident that if the California Supreme Court entertains this appeal, the same result will be produced as in the lower courts," Moss said.

Moss also said that the union was considering an action to join Finley's $10 million suit against baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "We could intervene as early as next week," Moss said.

In the damage suit filed Friday in Chicago, Finley asked for a temporary restraining order, which would cancel Kuhn's blockage of Oakland's $3.5 million sales.

Finley said after filing the suit that he had n intention of playing his three players in limbo, despite warnings from Kuhn.

"I'm not concerned about the grave consequences," Finley said. "Tell him to fire his guns."

The most severe action Kuhn could take is to remove Finley from baseball.

Pasarell, of Puerto Rico, pulled off another marathon come-from-behind victory. After trailing by two sets, he came back and defeated Phil Dent of Australia 2-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0, 7-5.

In the previous round, Pasarell did the same thing, recovering from two sets down and overcoming Italy's Adriano Panatta.

Bjorn Borg, despite a groin injury, hit top form in demolishing Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-2, 6-2, 7-5. Earlier in the day, the Swede asked for the match to be postponed and even talked of pulling out if he did not get his way. He decided to play after a doctor had examined him.

Meanwhile, Raul Ramirez of Mexico beat bearded Bernie Mitton of South Africa 9-8, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1 and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina ousted the last Australian hope, Tony Roche, 6-4, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

In the quarter-finals, it will be: Gerulaitis vs. Ramirez, Nastase vs. Pasarell, Vilas vs. Borg, and Tanner vs. Connors.

Marise Kruger, 17-year-old South African starlet, led Britain's Virginia Wade 5-2 in the final set and was within range of creating the sensation of the day in the women's singles. But the hard-hitting English player rallied to win 2-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Title favorite Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., defeated Betty Stove of The Netherlands 6-2, 6-2. It was a comparatively hard match for the American, who previously had lost only three games in three rounds.

Three-time champion Maria Bueno of Brazil, now 36, made a sentimental return to the center court after an absence of eight years. She showed much of her old-time grace and magic before Sue Barker of Britain beat her 2-6, 6-2, 6-1.

In the women's quarter-finals, the lineup will be: Miss Evert vs. Olga Morozova, Soviet Union; Martina Mavratilova, Czechoslovakia, vs. Miss Barker; Kerry Reid, Australia, vs. Mrs. Wade, and Rosie Casals, San Francisco, vs. Evonne Goolagong, Australia.

Billed as the World Martial Arts Championship, it was neither martial nor artistic. In what could only be described as a 45- minute yawn, Ali landed precisely two blows to the head of his opponent, Antonio Inoki.

Many in the audience of 14,000 who paid from $17 dollars to $1,000 to watch this dubious exhibition of inaction thought, all things considered, that Ineki, a lantern- jawed gentleman who took the initiative in his curious way throughout, had won.

Ali insisted, however, that he had been on the offensive, a fact less than visible to those in the crowd unless he meant his behavior, which in most ways was offensive in the extreme toward his foe.

Wise cracks, abuse. expletives, derisive hula dancing, nose thumbing and occasional recourse to sticking his tongue out failed to lure the honorable Inoki within range of Ali's four- ounce gloves.

The American referee called it a draw, to the wrestler and the wrestling judge thought it went to Ali.

Ali is to receive $6.1 million for his part in the proceedings and Inoki up to $4 million, most of the money coming from closed circuit television showings in the United States.

Besides the two punches Ali landed to Inoki's head, neither enough to stun nor floor him, the only other action in the 45-minute mismatch was when Inoki rushed Ali or knocked him to the mat with leg sweeps.

A newsman in a philosophical mood asked Ali what thoughts he had while he lay on the floor, on one occasion being sat on heavily.

"I was just letting time go by," replied Ali with a solemn face, "while I collect my $6 million."

The whole experience appeared to have left the usually voluble Ali in a less than cheerful mood. After briefly answering question in his dressing room in a voice which could hardly be heard, he announced, "I want to be alone."

He said he hadn't been hurt except for some bruises on his legs from the persistent sideswipes of his opponent. The money obviously hadn't hurt either since, according to referee Gene LeBell, Ali plans to confront another wrestler, Bruno Sanmartino, in New York after fights with Ken Norton and George Foreman.

Inoki told newsmen afterward he wasn't happy with the rules which prohibited him from tackling, using karate chops or punching on the mat. He admitted candidly that he had kept his distance to avoid the lethal sting of Ali's punches.

Inoki was silent when asked whether he would like a rematch.

The contest did nothing to prove whether a boxer could beat a wrestler, or the other way around. It was a little like trying to count bananas and oranges; they just aren't the same.

Tyson's fly helps Cards nip Phils

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Tyson's sacrifice fly scored the winning run in the 10th inning as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Saturday night.

Al Hrabosky, 5-5, pitched three scoreless innings in relief of Cardinal starter Bob Forsch to pick up the victory. Tug McGraw, 4-4, who took over in the eighth for Tom Underwood, was the loser.

Joe Ferguson doubled to start the 10th. Mike Anderson then sacrificed Ferguson to third. Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark then ordered Hector Cruz, a .210 hitter, intentionally walked to pitch to Tyson, batting .280, and Tyson foiled the move by hitting a fly to Greg Luzinski.

The Phillies, hitless for three innings, took a 2-0 lead in the fourth. Mike Schmidt doubled and rode home on Luzinski's double. Dick Allen sent Luzinski to third with a single and he scored when Forsch threw wildly trying to get Allen streaking for second.

Underwood, who was in trouble in every inning but the second and third, gave up two runs in the seventh. Jerry Mumphry led off with a double and scored on a single by Bake McBride on a ball that bounced over Dave Cash's head. Ted Simmons then doubled home the tying run.

Underwood pitched seven innings, giving up eight hits, striking out five and walking four. Forsch also worked seven, allowing the hard-hitting Phillies but five hits, striking out three and walking two.

Finley threatens suspension if A's players go on strike

AP Sports Writer

Embattled Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley, who steadfastly has refused to use three of his star players and now finds the other 22 threatening to strike, said Saturday:

"If they do strike, I just may go along and let them strike. Don't be surprised if there isn't any ball game in Oakland tomorrow (Sunday)."

Oakland owner Charles O. Finley ordered A's Manager Chuck Tanner not to play Vida Blue, Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi Saturday, setting up a dramatic confrontation with the rest of his players who have threatened to strike on Sunday.

"If they do strike, I just may go along and let them strike," Finley told San Francisco radio station KGO. "Don't be surprised if there isn't any ball game in Oakland tomorrow."

Finley, in Chicago, was in constant contact with Tanner, at Oakland, before Saturday's game, with the manager awaiting word from Finley whether he could insert outfielder-first baseman Rudi into the starting lineup.

Minutes before game time, Finley told Tanner to keep the three players out of the game, then asked to speak to Jim Todd, Oakland's player represenative.

Todd said Finley told him: "The gates will be open tomorrow. We will play a game at 1:30. And you people are welcome to participate."

On Friday night, Finley had threatened to suspend all his striking players and replace them with members of the Tuscon Toros of the Pacific Coast League.

But he quickly changed his mind on Saturday, telling San Francisco radio station KGO: "I have decided against bringing up a farm league team tomorrow."

Finley's reversal may stem from the following developments Saturday in this bizarre episode that now rivals an afternoon soap opera for daily disasters.

—Finley was informed by American League President Lee MacPhail that the league would not approve any suspension of Finley's striking players. That puts the squeeze on Finley, who can't elevate minor leaguers to the 25-man roster if he can't get league approval to suspend his major leaguers.

—Art Teece, owner of the Salt Lake City Gulls of the Pacific Coast League, threatened to take legal action if Finley pulled the Toros out of Saturday night's game with the Gulls. But Teece later said the game, a charity affair for the blind with a sellout crowd of 10,000 expected, would be played because Finley had changed his plans.

Dick Moss, general counsel for the Major League Baseball Players Association, Saturday sent the following notice to Finley.

"This telegram is being sent on behalf of players Vida Blue, Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi. Your refusal to permit the players to participate in championship games constitutes a default under their Uniform Player Contracts. Notice is hereby given, pursuant to Paragraph 7 (a), of the default and termination of said contracts.

"The act of not playing is the same as breaching a contract for improper payment," Moss said.

Finley now has 10 days to rectify the situation. If he doesn't, the players become free agents, Moss said.

In 1974, Catfish Hunter became a free agent after an arbitrator ruled that Finley violated 7 (a) by not paying Hunter in the stipulated manner.

By a 2-1 decision, Finley's appeal to have Hunter returned to the A's was struck down by the California Court of Appeals on Friday. Finley said he will appeal to the California Supreme Court.

"I am confident that if the California Supreme Court entertains this appeal, the same result will be produced as in the lower courts," Moss said.

Moss also said that the union was considering an action to join Finley's $10 million suit against baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "We could intervene as early as next week," Moss said.

In the damage suit filed Friday in Chicago, Finley asked for a temporary restraining order, which would cancel Kuhn's blockage of Oakland's $3.5 million sales.

Finley said after filing the suit that he had n intention of playing his three players in limbo, despite warnings from Kuhn.

"I'm not concerned about the grave consequences," Finley said. "Tell him to fire his guns."

The most severe action Kuhn could take is to remove Finley from baseball.

Monzon gains WBC middleweight crown

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Carlos Monzon, fighting with the arrogant relaxation of an instructor demonstrating boxing fundamentals, outpointed Rodrigo Valdes Saturday night and became the undisputed middleweight champion of the world.

It was a deceptively easy fight for the 33-year-old Argentine, who used his advantage in reach, his strength and his insolent style to take an early advantage over the Colombian and consolidate it with a 14th-round knockdown.

Valdes rushed Monzon through most of the fight but wore himself down in the tangle of Monzon's arms and in punching short when Monzon used his reach to keep him at arm's length on the ropes. Monzon, the World Boxing Association title holder, now takes back the World Boxing Council's half of the championship that Valdes had held since 1974.

Valdes' fans hoisted him in the air after the fight and the Colombian raised his hands in victory. But there seemed to be no doubt about the decision from the early rounds, when Monzon began to impose his rhythm on Valdes and use the ropes much in the manner of Muhammad Ali and his rope-a-dope trick—Monzon insists the inventuion is his—to keep Valdes away.

"It was the ropes that beat us," said Gil Clancy, Valdes' manager. "I complained about how loose they were five times to the referee, but they didn't do anything about it. He was able to lean out and keep away as if he were a guy hiking out of a sailboat."

When Clancy was asked about Valdes' slow start, not winning a round on The Associated Press scorecard until the eighth, Clancy replied: "Maybe it was nerves."

For Monzon, it was his 13th successful title defense in a career that has spanned 11½ years without defeat. The difference from his previous victories seemed to be that he started faster, and didn't suffer any of the three or four-round lapses that have plagued him throughout his career.

Monzon had frightened his best friends by a relaxed training routine in which they feared he spent more time with his Argentine actress girl friend Susanna Gimenez than in serious work in the gym. but he had clear control of the fight by the fourth round, landing repeatedly with hard rights, and had only one bad minute. That came in the eighth, when Valdes scored with a sharp right hand and then a good counter to the head off a Monzon jab.

But by that time, the 29-year-old son of a fisherman had trouble seeing out of his left eye which was closing from a welt. Monzon kept the fight under control through the middle rounds, pushing away Valdes' attacks.

The Argentine looked so relaxed and confident, it seemed as though he were giving a demonstration of boxing fundamentals.

Going like hotcakes: anglers line up for daily fishing permits at the August A. Busch Wildlife Area near St. Louis. The month of May was a record on the area with almost 25,000 fishing tags issued. Traffic count through the area was a staggering 162,500 people. (Department of Conservation photo)

Busch Wildlife Area draws record crowds

WELDON SPRING— Mostly, record performances are a cause for celebration, but no one at the Department of Conservation is thrilled by the news that May was a record attendance month at the Department's August A. Busch Memorial Wildlife Area near here.

There were 24,830 daily tags issued at the 6,987-acre area near here. That was just for fishing. The traffic count through the area was a staggering 162,500 people.

"It's been pretty chaotic," says Perley Cassady, the area manager, with a sigh. "Not only are there too many people, there are too many violations. We've had arrests for no license, no tag, short bass, over the limit and littering. One violator had 29 bass over the limit and they were short of the length limit to boot."

Cassady says littering is worse than it has been in some time. "When the Pitch In and other campaigns were at their peak, things got better," he says. "But they seem to have forgotten all that now."

The mass of people puts an incredible strain on the area's 32 "lakes" (mostly ponds) which total some 500 acres of fishing waters.

Adjacent to the Busch Area is the University of Missouri's 8,000-acre Weldon Spring Tract. The University has considered selling the tract, but the Departments of Conservation and Natural Resources have pleaded that the area be kept in openspace.

According to a proposal jointly worked out by the Departments of Conservation and Natural Resources and the St. Louis Zoo, the area could become a new state park, an extension of the Busch Area and a breeding facility for rare and endangered animals.

Governor Christopher S. Bond and several St. Louis area legislators have called for the land to remain in public ownership, open to the public.

A consulting firm's study, released in February, indicated several approaches the University could use, all involving development to realize money from the land.

The consulting firm's final report, which will include an environmental impact assessment, will be issued sometime in 1976.

Cairo fails to show; Saints meet Anna today

A non-conference game between the Sikeston Saints and Cairo was postponed Saturday afternoon when the Illinois team failed to show.

"This is the first time we've ever had something like this happen to us," said one of the team's coaches. "It was simply an unavoidable situation. Several of the Cairo players had to work later than they had planned. We were disappointed that they didn't think it was important enough to call until about two hours after the game was scheduled to start (4:00)."

The game won't be rescheduled.

The Saints will try to keep their Bi-State League good fortune going when they host the Cobden (Anna, Ill.) Fuzzies in a 2 p.m. game at V.F.W. Stadium today. A number of breaks and the ability to capitalize on them gave the Saints a 6-5 victory over Perryville a week ago in the team's previous game. Sikeston scored two runs in the bottom of the ninth to claim the win.

The Illinois team and Sikeston have met twice, splitting the two decisions. Sikeston beat the Fuzzies in the first meeting, 8-5, then dropped the second, 12-4. The Fuzzies presently reside in first place of the league standings with a 6-2 mark.

Starting hurler for Sikeston in Sunday afternoon's game will be righthander Don Miller.

"Don is as good as any pitcher in the league," was manager Tom Masterson's assessment of the team's latest addition. "He gives our staff a new, and better, look."

Dickson falters but still leads Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Bob Dickson, winless since 1973, saw his six-stroke lead slashed to two after 54 holes but hung on while his pursuers fell back to shoot a 74 for a three-under-par 210 and take a five-stroke margin after three rounds of the Western Open Saturday.

The 32-year-old Oklahoman had three straight bogies starting with the third hole and took a 39 on the front side. Meanwhile Al Geiberger made a charge with a pair of birdies and one bogey to draw up within two shots of Dickson after 27 holes.

Dickson, who has not been among the top 60 money winners the last two years and lost his exemption, then settled down with a birdie deuce on the 13th. He parred the next three holes but two traps cost him a bogey five at 17 and he salvaged a par 4 at 18 after coming out of the sand and sinking a four-foot putt for a 35.

Geiberger fell back in the bright, breezy weather at the Butler National Course, taking bogies on 10, 13 and 14 to finish with 35-38-73 for 215. Charles Coody, whose last victory was the 1971 Masters, tied Geiberger for second with a 215.

Coody started out with birdies on two of the first three holes but had a double bogey on eight for a 36 which placed him at even par after 27 holes. But another bogey at 10 and one at 17 when he was in the rough and had a bad chip shot left him with a 37 for a 73.

Joe Porter, who has won only $6,000 this year, closed with a 33 for a 71 and 216. With him in this bracket was Gil Morgan after a 73. At 217 was Bill Mallon, who blazed the last nine in 31 for a 71 and Hale Irwin the defending champion.

Irwin made a good move but a double bogey on the ninth set him back. He recovered with a birdie on 14 and another on 16 before again starting to sputter. A trap cost him a bogey on 17 and he double bogeyed 18 when his second shot hit the trees and he shanked the third. He finished with 36-36-72.

Grouped at 218 were veteran Peter Oosterhuis with a 72 and tour rookie Steve Veriato with a 74. Another fledgling, George Burns, had a 76 to be at 219 with Gay Brewer who closed with 72.

Dave Stockton, with a 73, was at 220 along with John Mahaffey who struggled for a 75.

It looked as if Mahaffey could make a charge after a couple of birdies on the front side/offset a bogey and he pulled up with a 35. This put him at 180 after 45 holes and within striking distance. But again he struggled on the backside and doubled bogeyed 13 and 14 and got another bogey at 18.

The wind added to the ruggedness of the 7,002-yard Butler National Course. One of those most affected was R.H. Sikes who had six double bogies, four bogies and an eight on the par-4 14th for a 91 and 242.

One of the best comebacks was by Bobby Wadkins. After shooting a 40 he sank a 187-yard five iron shot for an eagle deuce on the tenth. Then he dropped birdie putts of six and 20 feet and planted a wedge one inch fron the cup on the 16th for another birdie. He missed a four-foot putt after blasting from the sand to take a bogey on the 8th but wound up with a 31 for a 71 that left him at 222.

The 1974 Florida Downs racing season at Oldsmar, Fla., had $28,000 in uncashed mutuel tickets. The money was turned over to the state of Florida.

Allen's two homers lead Phils to 12-4 massacre Friday night

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When Dick Allen showed up for spring training and paid his own way to practice on a sandlot field during the baseball lockout, that should have been the tipoff this was going to be a different kind of season for the Philadelphia Phillies.

So far, it sure has.

It's June 26, and the Phillies are 9½ games ahead of defending champion Pittsburgh in the National League East. The team, is winning with awesome power, unbelievable defense and good pitching.

The fans know that something is brewing. The Phillies went over the one million mark in attendance Friday night when they waffled the St. Louis Cardinals, 12-4. It's the earliest million in club history.

And Allen, who once was booed out of town, is in the thick of this new world of Philadelphia baseball. He hit two home runs in Friday night's triumph, the last a three-run job in the eighth.

As the 34-year-old Allen circled the bases, the crowd of 38,474 rose as one and gave him a thundering ovation of almost one minute. It was a sound to hear.

The last time Allen got that kind of ovation in Philadelphia for his performance was when he left town in 1969.

Plate umpire Nick Colosi, realizing the fans wouldn't simmer down until Allen acknowledged the tribute, motioned for Allen to come out of the dugout. He stepped out and tipped his cap.

"It was an awful good feeling when the fans came down that way," Allen said. "It was just the opposite to the boos he used to get. I guess if I had to do it all over again I think it would be worth it."

Allen is playing the part of "Mr. Humble," this season.

"I'm trying to avoid this fellows," Allen began after a host of media types descended upon him in the clubhouse.

Someone interrupted to ask if he ever heard such an ovation for him in Philadelphia.

"It's the Bicenten isn't it," Allen replied, referring to the nation's Bicentennial celebration.

"They'll be standing on their feet for everyone on this team before it's over," Allen promised.

"But you can't forget the fact that this is only 47 wins," he added. "We've got a division to win first."

Allen waved his hand toward the Cardinals' locker room down the corridor and said pointedly, "The Cards, they're way back, but they're the same guys who came and got us in 1964."

Allen hasn't forgotten his rookie season of 12 years ago, when the Phillies led the National League there were no divisions then by 6½ games with just 12 left to play. Philadelphia went into a 10-game tailspin and lost the pennant by half a game.

Allen himself indicated how good things were with the Phillies when he noted, "It's almost July and I'm still taking batting practice."

Allen is reluctant to talk about playoffs and World Series. He knows that half a season is not enough. They don't pay off in July, but in October. But he couldn't help making a recent observation.

"I'd pay to see the Phillies against Cincinnati in the playoffs," he observed. "It might be more exciting than the World Series against the American League's best team. You'd see speed, base running, power, fielding, pitching, what the game's all about."

Allen is at the age now where he rues some of the past.

"I don't know if I've ever reached my peak, the injuries, the fighting," he said after Friday night's four RBI production.

Someone asked why he's swinging better this season than last, when he hit .233 after returning to the Phillies from Atlanta.

What kind of pitch did he hit for his two homers?

"National League fastballs with Chub Feeney's league president name on it," Allen said.

"Talk about the club, not me," Allen insisted.

Going like hotcakes: anglers line up for daily fishing permits at the August A. Busch Wildlife Area near St. Louis. The month of May was a record on the area with almost 25,000 fishing tags issued. Traffic count through the area was a staggering 162,500 people. (Department of Conservation photo)

Busch Wildlife Area draws record crowds

WELDON SPRING— Mostly, record performances are a cause for celebration, but no one at the Department of Conservation is thrilled by the news that May was a record attendance month at the Department's August A. Busch Memorial Wildlife Area near here.

There were 24,830 daily tags issued at the 6,987-acre area near here. That was just for fishing. The traffic count through the area was a staggering 162,500 people.

"It's been pretty chaotic," says Perley Cassady, the area manager, with a sigh. "Not only are there too many people, there are too many violations. We've had arrests for no license, no tag, short bass, over the limit and littering. One violator had 29 bass over the limit and they were short of the length limit to boot."

Cassady says littering is worse than it has been in some time. "When the Pitch In and other campaigns were at their peak, things got better," he says. "But they seem to have forgotten all that now."

The mass of people puts an incredible strain on the area's 32 "lakes" (mostly ponds) which total some 500 acres of fishing waters.

Adjacent to the Busch Area is the University of Missouri's 8,000-acre Weldon Spring Tract. The University has considered selling the tract, but the Departments of Conservation and Natural Resources have pleaded that the area be kept in open space.

According to a proposal jointly worked out by the Departments of Conservation and Natural Resources and the St. Louis Zoo, the area could become a new state park, an extension of the Busch Area and a breeding facility for rare and endangered animals.

Governor Christopher S. Bond and several St. Louis area legislators have called for the land to remain in public ownership, open to the public.

A consulting firm's study, released in February, indicated several approaches the University could use, all involving development to realize money from the land.

The consulting firm's final report, which will include an environmental impact assessment, will be issued sometime in 1976.

Cairo fails to show; Saints meet Anna today

A non-conference game between the Sikeston Saints and Cairo was postponed Saturday afternoon when the Illinois team failed to show.

"This is the first time we've ever had something like this happen to us," said one of the team's coaches. "It was simply an unavoidable situation. Several of the Cairo players had to work later than they had planned. We were disappointed that they didn't think it was important enough to call until about two hours after the game was scheduled to start (4:00)."

The Saints will try to keep their Bi-State League good fortune going when they host the Cobden (Anna, Ill.) Fuzzies in a 2 p.m. game at V.F.W. Stadium today. A number of breaks and the ability to capitalize on them gave the Saints a 6-5 victory over Perryville a week ago in the team's previous game. Sikeston scored two runs in the bottom of the ninth to claim the win.

The Illinois team and Sikeston have met twice, splitting the two decisions. Sikeston beat the Fuzzies in the first meeting, 8-5, then dropped the second, 12-4. The Fuzzies presently reside in first place of the league standings with a 6-2 mark.

Starting hurler for Sikeston in Sunday afternoon's game will be righthander Don Miller.

"Don is as good as any pitcher in the league," was manager Tom Masterson's assessment of the team's latest addition. "He gives our staff a new, and better, look."

Dickson falters but still leads Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Bob Dickson, winless since 1973, saw his six-stroke lead slashed to two after 54 holes but hung on while his pursuers fell back to shoot a 74 for a three-under-par 210 and take a five-stroke margin after three rounds of the Western Open Saturday.

The 32-year-old Oklahoman had three straight bogies starting with the third hole and took a 39 on the front side. Meanwhile Al Geiberger made a charge with a pair of birdies and one bogey to draw up within two shots of Dickson after 27 holes.

Dickson, who has not been among the top 60 money winners the last two years and lost his exemption, then settled down with a birdie deuce on the 13th. He parred the next three holes but two traps cost him a bogey five at 17 and he salvaged a par 4 at 18 after coming out of the sand and sinking a four-foot putt for a 35.

Geiberger fell back in the bright, breezy weather at the Butler National Course, taking bogies on 10, 13 and 14 to finish with 35-38-73 for 215. Charles Coody, whose last victory was the 1971 Masters, tied Geiberger for second with a 215.

Coody started out with birdies on two of the first three holes but had a double bogey on eight for a 36 which placed him at even par after 27 holes. But another bogey at 10 and one at 17 when he was in the rough and had a bad chip shot left him with a 37 for a 73.

Joe Porter, who has won only $6,000 this year, closed with a 33 for a 71 and 216. With him in this bracket was Gil Morgan after a 73. At 217 was Bill Mallon, who blazed the last nine in 31 for a 71 and Hale Irwin the defending champion.

Irwin made a good move but a double bogey on the ninth set him back. He recovered with a birdie on 14 and another on 16 before again starting to sputter. A trap cost him a bogey on 17 and he double bogeyed 18 when his second shot hit the trees and he shanked the third. He finished with 36-36-72.

Grouped at 218 were veteran Peter Oosterhuis with a 72 and tour rookie Steve Veriato with a 74. Another fledgling, George Burns, had a 76 to be at 219 with Gay Brewer who closed with 72.

Dave Stockton, with a 73, was at 220 along with John Mahaffey who struggled for a 75.

It looked as if Mahaffey could make a charge after a couple of birdies on the front side/offset a bogey and he pulled up with a 35. This put him at 180 after 45 holes and within striking distance. But again he struggled on the backside and doubled bogeyed 13 and 14 and got another bogey at 18.

The wind added to the ruggedness of the 7,002-yard Butler National Course. One of those most affected was R.H. Sikes who had six double bogies, four bogies and an eight on the par-4 14th for a 91 and 242.

One of the best comebacks was by Bobby Wadkins. After shooting a 40 he sank a 187-yard five iron shot for an eagle deuce on the tenth. Then he dropped birdie putts of six and 20 feet and planted a wedge one inch fron the cup on the 16th for another birdie. He missed a four-foot putt after blasting from the sand to take a bogey on the 8th but wound up with a 31 for a 71 that left him at 222.

The 1974 Florida Downs racing season at Oldsmar, Fla., had $28,000 in uncashed mutuel tickets. The money was turned over to the state of Florida.

Allen's two homers lead Phils to 12-4 massacre Friday night

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When Dick Allen showed up for spring training and paid his own way to practice on a sandlot field during the baseball lockout, that should have been the tipoff this was going to be a different kind of season for the Philadelphia Phillies.

So far, it sure has.

It's June 26, and the Phillies are 9½ games ahead of defending champion Pittsburgh in the National League East. The team, is winning with awesome power, unbelievable defense and good pitching.

The fans know that something is brewing. The Phillies went over the one million mark in attendance Friday night when they waffled the St. Louis Cardinals, 12-4. It's the earliest million in club history.

And Allen, who once was booed out of town, is in the thick of this new world of Philadelphia baseball. He hit two home runs in Friday night's triumph, the last a three-run job in the eighth.

As the 34-year-old Allen circled the bases, the crowd of 38,474 rose as one and gave him a thundering ovation of almost one minute. It was a sound to hear.

The last time Allen got that kind of ovation in Philadelphia for his performance was when he left town in 1969.

Plate umpire Nick Colosi, realizing the fans wouldn't simmer down until Allen acknowledged the tribute, motioned for Allen to come out of the dugout. He stepped out and tipped his cap.

"It was an awful good feeling when the fans came down that way," Allen said. "It was just the opposite to the boos he used to get. I guess if I had to do it all over again I think it would be worth it."

Allen is playing the part of "Mr. Humble," this season.

"I'm trying to avoid this fellows," Allen began after a host of media types descended upon him in the clubhouse.

Someone interrupted to ask if he ever heard such an ovation for him in Philadelphia.

"It's the Bicenten isn't it," Allen replied, referring to the nation's Bicentennial celebration.

"They'll be standing on their feet for everyone on this team before it's over," Allen promised.

"But you can't forget the fact that this is only 47 wins," he added. "We've got a division to win first."

Allen waved his hand toward the Cardinals' locker room down the corridor and said pointedly, "The Cards, they're way back, but they're the same guys who came and got us in 1964."

Allen hasn't forgotten his rookie season of 12 years ago, when the Phillies led the National League there were no divisions then by 6½ games with just 12 left to play. Philadelphia went into a 10-game tailspin and lost the pennant by half a game.

Allen himself indicated how good things were with the Phillies when he noted, "It's almost July and I'm still taking batting practice."

Allen is reluctant to talk about playoffs and World Series. He knows that half a season is not enough. They don't pay off in July, but in October. But he couldn't help making a recent observation.

"I'd pay to see the Phillies against Cincinnati in the playoffs," he observed. "It might be more exciting than the World Series against the American League's best team. You'd see speed, base running, power, fielding, pitching, what the game's all about."

Allen is at the age now where he rues some of the past.

"I don't know if I've ever reached my peak, the injuries, the fighting," he said after Friday night's four RBI production.

Someone asked why he's swinging better this season than last, when he hit .233 after returning to the Phillies from Atlanta.

What kind of pitch did he hit for his two homers?

"National League fastballs with Chub Feeney's league president name on it," Allen said.

"Talk about the club, not me," Allen insisted.

Godwin beaten

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — The veteran is scheduled to play the youngster for the Missouri State Amateur Golf Championship Sunday the St. Joseph Country Club.

Jackson defeated Luther Godwin, of Poplar Bluff, 2-up, in the quarter-finals of the tournament Saturday morning, and in the afternoon semifinal match, the veteran golfer topped Payne Stewart of Springfield, 3 and 1.

Goettel beat David Brookreson of St. Louis, 4 and 3, in his quarter-final match. Goettel then topped Jim Baraban of Kansas City, 4 and 3, to advance to today's finals.

"I played pretty well," said Jackson of his semifinal win. "I'm very happy with my game. I just hope I can keep it up."

Jackson has won the state title three times.

A 28-year-old Jackson first won the title in 1951. He took it again in1954 and then scored again in the 1959 tournament.

"If I could win it a fourth time, I'd be extremely happy," said Jackson.

Goettel will be making his first appearance in the finals of the Missouri tournament. The Carthage golfer has, however, competed in the semifinals of the tournament three times.

Phil Esposito of the New York Rangers scored 61 goals in 79 games for the Boston Bruins of National Hockey League last season.

All three leagues in the Sikeston Little League took advantage of sunny weather Friday and Saturday to get in some make-up games after rains forced postponement of play earlier in the week.

Because of a lack of space, The Daily Standard will only be able to publish the box scores on Friday's games today. Box scores from Saturday's games will be printed Monday. However, to keep the Little League's followers informed, will publish the final scores from both days, along with up-to- date standings.

Jenner sets new record in decathlon event

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Bruce Jenner tuned up for his second Olymwic Games Saturday by smashing the world record in the grueling decathlon, scoring 8,538 points in winning the event at the U.S. Olympic track and field trials at the University of Oregon.

Fred Dixon and Fred Samara finished second and third, respectively, grabbing the other two berths in the decathlon for the Montreal Olympics.

The 26-year-old Jenner, formerly of Graceland College in Iowa, was not planning to go after his own world mark of 8,524 points for the 10-event, two-day test, but he was advised after the ninth event that he was within striking distance.

All he needed, he was told, was a fast 1,500-meter run, so the 6-foot-2, 190-pounder went after it. His time was 4:16.4, just two seconds off his career best.

Dixon, from Los Angeles, built up a substantial lead in second place and also made the team with his 8,265. Samara, of the New York Athletic Club, and three others were within two points of each other when the 1,500 began, but Samara recorded a time of 4:28.5 for 7,980 points to take the third spot on the U.S. team, ahead of Roger George, formerly of Fresno State, who scored a lifetime best of 7,930.

Jenner's previous world mark was set on this same track last year, but points were awarded on the basis of hand timing. The record for automatic timing was 8,454, set by Nicolay Avilov of the Soviet Union in winning the 1972 Olympics.

Jenner did not run fast enough in the 1,500 to better that mark, but he gets a second crack at the Soviet champion in Montreal. Jenner, on the basis of electronic timing, scored 8,444 points to fall 10 points short of Avilov's record.

Jenner ran the opening event of the second day, the hurdles, in 14.57, and remained in third place, the position he held after Friday's opening five events.

Oran downs Cape

ORAN — Jerry Tenkhoff pitched Oran past the Cape Mets here Friday night 13-3 in a SEMO Softball League game. Tenkhoff limited the Mets to only three hits while his teammates backed his hurling with a 13- hit barrage.

Oran blasted losing pitcher Ron Kirby for five runs in the bottom of the first inning and added three in the second, two in the fourth and three more in the fifth.

Terry Mobley and Henry Dirnberger led the Oran team in hits with three apiece but Mark Amick slammed two doubles and knocked in five runs in the five inning game.

Cape scored one run in the second and two in the third.

Godwin beaten

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — The veteran is scheduled to play the youngster for the Missouri State Amateur Golf Championship Sunday the St. Joseph Country Club.

Jim G. Jackson, a 53-year-old veteran amateur from St. Louis, will square off against Dennis Goettel, a 22-year-old from Carthage, in 36 holes of match play for the title.

Jackson defeated Luther Godwin, of Poplar Bluff, 2-up, in the quarter-finals of the tournament Saturday morning, and in the afternoon semifinal match, the veteran golfer topped Payne Stewart of Springfield, 3 and 1.

Goettel beat David Brookreson of St. Louis, 4 and 3, in his quarter-final match. Goettel then topped Jim Baraban of Kansas City, 4 and 3, to advance to today's finals.

"I played pretty well," said Jackson of his semifinal win. "I'm very happy with my game. I just hope I can keep it up."

Jackson has won the state title three times.

A 28-year-old Jackson first won the title in 1951. He took it again in1954 and then scored again in the 1959 tournament.

"If I could win it a fourth time, I'd be extremely happy," said Jackson.

Goettel will be making his first appearance in the finals of the Missouri tournament. The Carthage golfer has, however, competed in the semifinals of the tournament three times.

Sikeston man is accepted at Berklee

BOSTON, Mass. — Boston's Berklee College of Music has enrolled Joseph H. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Moore of Sikeston, Mo., in its Freshman Class of 1976.

Berklee offers a B.M. Degree with majors in music education, composition and applied music. A professional diploma course is also offered encompassing all music subjects.

Moore's curriculum will include courses in arranging, improvisation, solo and orchestral performances, as well as courses in the humanities. He will be exposed to many of Berklee's celebrated jazz educators including vibist Gary Burton, trumpeter Herb Pomeroy and saxophonist John LaPorta.

TRCC budgets surplus in 1977

POPLAR BLUFF— The Three Rivers Community College District Board of Trustees reviewed a budget which included a surplus of approximately $60,000 for fiscal year 1977 at their June 16 meeting.

This will be the first time in the ten-year history of the college that a surplus has been budgeted. Harold LaBrot, college business manager, said the "contingency amount" will be reserved for equipment repairs or replacement in the event of an emergency or for similar emergency expenses not included in the budget.

The 1977 budget will be studied until the July trustees meeting when it will probably be adopted formally. The budget shows anticipated revenues of $1,995,104 and anticipated total expenditures of $1,934,169. Approximately 31 per cent of total revenues will come from state aid. Twenty-two per cent will be from local taxes, 19 per cent from tuition and fees and 19 per cent from federal funds.

The largest item budgeted for expenditures is instruction which accounts for 40 per cent of the total. Student services will be 20 per cent and academic support, which includes learning resources and some library costs, will be 12 per cent of total expenditures.

Also, board members learned the anticipated $32,000 deficit budgeted for fiscal year 1976 will probably be covered by additional state aid recently released to junior colleges.

Trustees approved a motion to establish the rate of taxation for the college district for 1976 at 40 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation. This is the amount which can be set by action of the board without voter approval.

In other action, board members accepted the resignation of Mary Nepean as secretary to the director of the Talent Search program, and approved the employment of Anthony Asberry as a replacement instructor in adult education in agriculture.

Board members approved the adoption of a new salary schedule for classified personnel. The budget for next year includes salary increases for faculty and other employees as outlined in earlier board meetings.

The board was informed the annual audit is now in process. The cost to the college for the audit will be $3,500.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Dr. Tudor Westover, retiring college president, thanked the board for their cooperation, guidance and inspiration given him while working with them and William Becker, chairman of the board, praised the president for his leadership and devotion to the school during the past ten years.

"We have enjoyed the fine leadership of Tudor Westover and the college has greatly benefited from having him as our president," said Becker. "It was quite an accomplishment for him to start out with nothing and bring the college to where it is today."

Charleston appoints new city park director

CHARLESTON— Bob Glass, formerly of Charleston, was appointed June 1 as the park director for Charleston.

Glass, 38, was born and raised in the Charleston area and attended schools in the surrounding area. In 1956 he joined the navy where he served various ships, aircraft and shore stations until his retirement in July of 1975.

Glass is married to the former Margaret Griffin of Charleston. They have two daughters, Mrs. Robert Robertson of Charleston, and Sandra, 15, of the home.

"I feel that Charleston can have a good recreation program but it will take a lot of hard work from volunteers to do it. The creation of a workable recreation program is not a one man job, but I am willing to do the job as long as I am needed," Glass said last week.

The Prayer

"They were awestruck and said to one another, 'Who can this be? Even the wind and the sea obey him.' " (Mark 4:41, NEB)

PRAYER: Dear Lord, Thy wonders are magnificent. Help us to be still and know that Thou art God, In Jesus' name. Amen.

Charleston to have 'straw vote' on center construction

CHARLESTON— Charleston voters will take part August 3 in a straw vote on the construction of a community center-auditorium building.

The City Council adopted a resolution Monday night calling for the vote, which is not binding, but would be an expression of community sentiment on the proposition.

The proposed building would include an auditorium, multi-purpose meeting rooms, possible Chamber of Commerce office space, a craft center, kitchen for serving dinners and banquets, plus other facilities which would be worked out between a planning committee and architect.

Cost of the structure has been budgeted by the Council at a maximum of $600,000, including site development and architect fees. The building would be constructed with Community Development funds, at no cost to the taxpayer. The 1976 C.D. program contains $50,000 for plans, specifications and site acquisition. Construction would be in the 1977 budget.

However, because maintenance and operating costs, which would come from user fees are supplemented by local general revenue funds, the Council decided to submit the question to the voters.

Exact wording of the straw vote ballot will be determined by the Council at its July 13 meeting.

The relatives voted to continue the reunion and appointed a committee to organize next year's reunion.

The group had a basket lunch and entertainment was provided by several family members who are musicians.

GRANNIS, Ark. (AP) — Twenty-four people waiting for the second coming of Christ aren't worried about a threat to repossess the home they are living in. They believe they will be gone — along with the rest of the world — before marshals come to evict them.

"We don't think God will let us be broken up, so we don't believe we'll be here when they come to take the house," said Elizabeth Nance Bard.

The deadline for them to appeal the respossession of their home is Wednesday, but it's not certain yet when eviction will be attempted.

The U.S. attorney's office in Fort Smith has filed suit against Mrs. Bard's brother, Gene Nance. They say he defaulted on a $15,000 loan to buy the house where the vigil began last Sept. 29.

In April, the Farmers Housing Administration took legal possession of Nance's home. But the vigil members — who have been waiting for redemption for nine months — refused to leave, and legal proceedings were started.

Court officials say that if Nance fails to respond by Wednesday, a default judgment probably will be handed down. U.S. Atty. Robert Johnson says that would probably result in marshals traveling to this southwest Arkansas community and evicting the vigil members.

Mrs. Bard said the group won't fight eviction.

"The sooner the better," she said. "Maybe something will happen. Our great hope is that the end will occur before they come.

"We don't think God will let them split us up," she added.

Mrs. Bard said the vigil members have no idea what they will do if the second coming hasn't occurred by the time the marshals arrive.

"We have no plans at all," she said. "It would be foolish to resist physically. We wouldn't scatter very far ... We don't know, we just have made any plans, to move anywhere else. It is possible."

The vigil began at a family prayer meeting when one member of the group said she received a message from God that the second coming of Christ was near and that they should remain in the house until Christ arrived.

TRCC budgets surplus in 1977

POPLAR BLUFF— The Three Rivers Community College District Board of Trustees reviewed a budget which included a surplus of approximately $60,000 for fiscal year 1977 at their June 16 meeting.

This will be the first time in the ten-year history of the college that a surplus has been budgeted. Harold LaBrot, college business manager, said the "contingency amount" will be reserved for equipment repairs or replacement in the event of an emergency or for similar emergency expenses not included in the budget.

The 1977 budget will be studied until the July trustees meeting when it will probably be adopted formally. The budget shows anticipated revenues of $1,995,104 and anticipated total expenditures of $1,934,169. Approximately 31 per cent of total revenues will come from state aid. Twenty-two per cent will be from local taxes, 19 per cent from tuition and fees and 19 per cent from federal funds.

The largest item budgeted for expenditures is instruction which accounts for 40 per cent of the total. Student services will be 20 per cent and academic support, which includes learning resources and some library costs, will be 12 per cent of total expenditures.

Also, board members learned the anticipated $32,000 deficit budgeted for fiscal year 1976 will probably be covered by additional state aid recently released to junior colleges.

Trustees approved a motion to establish the rate of taxation for the college district for 1976 at 40 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation. This is the amount which can be set by action of the board without voter approval.

In other action, board members accepted the resignation of Mary Nepean as secretary to the director of the Talent Search program, and approved the employment of Anthony Asberry as a replacement instructor in adult education in agriculture.

Board members approved the adoption of a new salary schedule for classified personnel. The budget for next year includes salary increases for faculty and other employees as outlined in earlier board meetings.

The board was informed the annual audit is now in process. The cost to the college for the audit will be $3,500.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Dr. Tudor Westover, retiring college president, thanked the board for their cooperation, guidance and inspiration given him while working with them and William Becker, chairman of the board, praised the president for his leadership and devotion to the school during the past ten years.

"We have enjoyed the fine leadership of Tudor Westover and the college has greatly benefited from having him as our president," said Becker. "It was quite an accomplishment for him to start out with nothing and bring the college to where it is today."

GRANNIS, Ark. (AP) — Twenty-four people waiting for the second coming of Christ aren't worried about a threat to repossess the home they are living in. They believe they will be gone — along with the rest of the world — before marshals come to evict them.

"We don't think God will let us be broken up, so we don't believe we'll be here when they come to take the house," said Elizabeth Nance Bard.

The deadline for them to appeal the respossession of their home is Wednesday, but it's not certain yet when eviction will be attempted.

The U.S. attorney's office in Fort Smith has filed suit against Mrs. Bard's brother, Gene Nance. They say he defaulted on a $15,000 loan to buy the house where the vigil began last Sept. 29.

In April, the Farmers Housing Administration took legal possession of Nance's home. But the vigil members — who have been waiting for redemption for nine months — refused to leave, and legal proceedings were started.

Court officials say that if Nance fails to respond by Wednesday, a default judgment probably will be handed down. U.S. Atty. Robert Johnson says that would probably result in marshals traveling to this southwest Arkansas community and evicting the vigil members.

Mrs. Bard said the group won't fight eviction.

"We have no plans at all," she said. "It would be foolish to resist physically. We wouldn't scatter very far ... We don't know, we just have made any plans, to move anywhere else. It is possible."

The vigil began at a family prayer meeting when one member of the group said she received a message from God that the second coming of Christ was near and that they should remain in the house until Christ arrived.

Composer of Moon River

Four time Oscar winner dies at 66

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Mercer, whose haunting jazz and blues lyrics thrilled millions for half a century, won four Oscars and made him the highest-paid song writer in the world, has died at age 66.

The mellow-voiced Merver, who wrote lyrics for such hit songs as "Laura," "That Old Black Magic," "Jeepers, Creepers" and "Moon River," died Friday at his Bel Air home.

A family spokesman said his death was caused by complications from brain surgery performed last Oct. 25 to remove a benign tumor.

Mercer began his career as a performer, but gained world fame for his haunting lyrics for the 1944 movie mystery "Laura."

"I tried to be a singer and failed," Mercer once said. "Then I tried to be an actor and failed. So I just naturally fell into lyric writing."

He gave up his acting ambitions and began singing in New York cabarets, where he was noticed by Paul Whiteman.

"Lazy Bones," written in collaboration with Hoagy Carmichael was one of Mercer's earliest song hits. As the years passed, Mercer began limiting his appearances and devoting full time to lyric writing.

Born Nov. 18, 1909, in Savannah, Ga., Mercer wrote his first song — "When Sister Suzy Struts Her Stuff" — for his sister. His first of some 75 hits was "Out of Breath, Scared to Death of You," written in 1929 for the Garrick Gaieties, a musical revue.

Mercer, who never lost the soft southern drawl of his native Georgia, did not win a role with the Gaieties, but married one of its performers, Elizabeth "Tinger" Meehan. The couple had two children, Amanda and John.

The composer won Oscars for "The Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe" in 1946, "In the Cool, Coool, Cool of the Evening" in 1952, "Moon River" in 1962 and "Days of Wine and Roses" in 1963. He also wrote the lyrics for "Blues in the Night."

Mercer sometimes wrote both words and music with such songs as "Something's Gotta Give," "G.I. Jive," "Dream" and "I'm an old Cowhand."

His film scores included "Here Come the Waves," "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," "Daddy Long Legs," "Star-Spangled Rhythm" and "The Harvey Girls."

Among his Broadway shows were "St. Louis Woman," "Top Banana," "Li'l Abner" and "Foxy." His most recent show was "Good Companions" which he wrote with Andre Previn; it ran for a year in London.

previous week, was fined $10 plus $10 costs and a two-day jail sentence to be suspended upon payment of fine and costs, which he paid.

Donald Spraggs charged with careless and heedless driving on a motorcycle without lights and speeding on the night of June 17, pleaded guilty and was assessed $50 fine plus $10 costs and a five-day jail sentence to be suspended upon payment of fine and costs, which were paid. Spraggs was also assessed a $25 fine, $10 costs and a five-day jail sentence to be suspended upon payment of fine and costs on a peace disturbance charge on the same night, which he paid.

Grimes pleaded guilty to a June 13 charge of using loud and profane language in public. He paid a $25 fine plus $10 costs and a five-day jail sentence was suspended.

Grimes, Carlisle and Bledsoe are adults and the others reportedly range between 17 and 21 years.

There has been considerable open talk recently concerning law enforcement in the city. Charges and countercharges have been leveled between city officials and alleged offenders.

Officials claim that there are groups of young people and a few adults who have been involved consistently with creating peace disturbances and also destruction of public property.

The officials charge the persons involved have been steadily getting "wilder" and becoming more defiant of the laws and the police. It was stated that caravans are formed with automobiles which drive throughout the city late at night at excessive speeds, horns blowing, tires squealing and the occupants shouting and yelling or cursing. Street signs have been run over and knocked down by cars or shot at with guns and a fence was rammed and torn up at the city park.

City officials claim the law-abiding citizens are fed up and it's time for them to take a strong stand against those responsible.

Some of the people who have been arrested claim undue harrassment by inexperienced and untrained police whom they charge are eager to issue tickets for fines to add to the city's meager funds.

The unlawful assembly charges, according to the marshal, were made against the men who had gathered in a group on the street after midnight shouting obscenities at him, making threats, and encouraging and aiding young Spraggs to continue to violate the law on his motorcycle and evade the police.

Spradling stated he told the group to disperse and to either go home or get completely out of town. He said the men moved about a block away but didn't disperse and regrouped again.

Composer of Moon River

Four time Oscar winner dies at 66

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Mercer, whose haunting jazz and blues lyrics thrilled millions for half a century, won four Oscars and made him the highest-paid song writer in the world, has died at age 66.

The mellow-voiced Merver, who wrote lyrics for such hit songs as "Laura," "That Old Black Magic," "Jeepers, Creepers" and "Moon River," died Friday at his Bel Air home.

A family spokesman said his death was caused by complications from brain surgery performed last Oct. 25 to remove a benign tumor.

Mercer began his career as a performer, but gained world fame for his haunting lyrics for the 1944 movie mystery "Laura."

"I tried to be a singer and failed," Mercer once said. "Then I tried to be an actor and failed. So I just naturally fell into lyric writing."

He gave up his acting ambitions and began singing in New York cabarets, where he was noticed by Paul Whiteman.

"Lazy Bones," written in collaboration with Hoagy Carmichael was one of Mercer's earliest song hits. As the years passed, Mercer began limiting his appearances and devoting full time to lyric writing.

Born Nov. 18, 1909, in Savannah, Ga., Mercer wrote his first song — "When Sister Suzy Struts Her Stuff" — for his sister. His first of some 75 hits was "Out of Breath, Scared to Death of You," written in 1929 for the Garrick Gaieties, a musical revue.

Mercer, who never lost the soft southern drawl of his native Georgia, did not win a role with the Gaieties, but married one of its performers, Elizabeth "Tinger" Meehan. The couple had two children, Amanda and John.

The composer won Oscars for "The Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe" in 1946, "In the Cool, Coool, Cool of the Evening" in 1952, "Moon River" in 1962 and "Days of Wine and Roses" in 1963. He also wrote the lyrics for "Blues in the Night."

Mercer sometimes wrote both words and music with such songs as "Something's Gotta Give," "G.I. Jive," "Dream" and "I'm an old Cowhand."

Among his Broadway shows were "St. Louis Woman," "Top Banana," "Li'l Abner" and "Foxy." His most recent show was "Good Companions" which he wrote with Andre Previn; it ran for a year in London.

Business

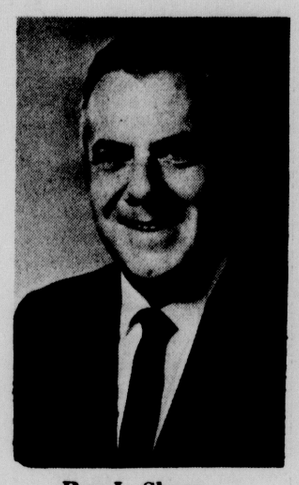
Two receive new appointments

WICKLIFFE — Roy L. Sharp, manager of the Wickliffe paper mill of Westvaco Corporation since its construction was authorized in 1967, is returning to the company's New York office for a new assignment in the Fine Papers Division related to expansion planning.

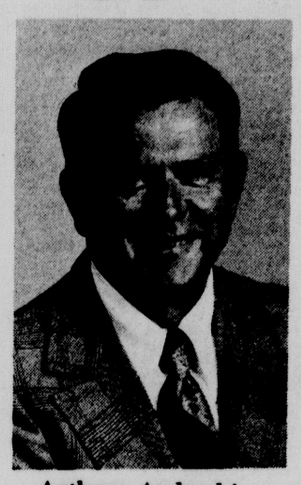
Harold A. Sutphen, vice president and manager of the Fine Papers Division, said Mr. Sharp will become manager of facilities planning for the division, a job that involves coordinating mill operating and engineering groups in planning for future growth.

Anthony Androski, manager of the company's Tyrone, Pa., mill, a manufacturer of specialty products, will succeed Sharp as manager of the Wickliffe mill. Androski joined Westvaco 21 years ago and has served in a number of administrative and managerial positions in the company's New York headquarters and at the Tyrone mill.

"The growing demand for our papers and the long-term prospect of strength in our markets, combined with the escalating costs of new facilities, places a premium on sound and orderly expansion planning," Mr. Sutphen said in describing Sharp's new position.



Roy L. Sharp



Anthony Androski

Some of the projects currently under consideration, he said, include the modernization of the pulp mill at the company's Luke, Md., mill, rebuilds of the two largest paper machines at that location and expansion of pulp capacity at the Wickliffe mill up to the full capability of the recovery boiler.

Sharp became manager of the Wickliffe mill at the time its construction was authorized in 1967, helped form and develop the organization, and brought the mill through the startup stage to its present levels of operating efficiency.

Prior to that, he was responsible for the studies and recommendations that led to the decision of the Westvaco board of directors to authorize the project.

Holder of a degree in civil engineering from Renesselaer Polytechnic Institute, Sharp joined the company at its Mechanicville, N.Y., mill in 1951 as a technical trainee in construction and maintenance. He moved up to foreman of construction and maintenance and then to superintendent of the same department in 1956.

In 1959 he was promoted to plant engineer at Mechanicville and in the summer of 1964 was transferred to Westvaco's Luke, Md., mill as engineering superintendent. A year later he became project engineer for the Fine Papers Division, headquartered in New York.

Androski has been manager of the Tyrone mill since July 1974 and has had additional responsibility for the overall direction of Westvaco's Edgemate Division and for safeguarding the curtailed facilities at its Williamsburg, Pa., mill since Dec. 1, 1975.

A graduate of Miami University of Ohio with a B.S. degree in business administration, Androski was a senior accountant with Price Waterhouse & Company for six years before becoming associated with Westvaco in 1955 as systems and methods manager in the Comptroller's Department in New York City.

He joined the Tyrone organization in 1959 as commercial superintendent and in 1966 was promoted to administration manager. He was advanced to assistant manager, administration, in 1974 and four months later became Tyrone mill manager.

Study shows recent strength in oils

By CROCKETT SCOTT

Source & Professional traders in St. Louis.

A favorite of Security Exchange Commission registered security analysts in St. Louis is Gulf, with estimated earnings of $4.25 per share for 1976, against $3.60 last year. Annual yield is better than 6 per cent, with a $1.70 per share payout.

Gulf, trading around 26-27, has about the lowest price-earnings ratio--roughly 6--of any of the international oils.

The international oils all are trading near their 1976 highs, but technicians, studying recent strength, speculate that the group could move higher in a relatively short period.

A summer rally may be in the works now, some of their number believe, and the oils---domestics as well as the internationals---along with offshore drilling company equities could benefit, as investment capital shifts away from steels, chemicals and autos.

Analysts note that traders have taken profits in many instances from these latter classifications; and are looking for other equity groups for the fast turn.

Estimated earnings for the international oils are up considerably over last year; though not up to the exceptionally high profit year of 1974.

Exxon, selling around $100 or so per share, earned $13.54 per common share during 1974; eased to $11.19 last year; while analysts are estimating $12.50 for 1976.

The dividend of $5.50, of course, is amply covered, as are the dividends of the other internationals; Mobil, Texaco, Standard of California and Gulf.

Earnings of the domestic oils also will be up over 1975, according to professional estimates.

Standard of Indiana, for instance, is expected to report about $6.75 per share, as compared to $5.36 for 1975. Atlantic Richfield should net $7.25 per share against $6.16. Shell is calculated to report $8.50, with $7.59 recorded during 1975.

Cities' Service should earn $6.00 versus the $5.12 per share last year.

A clue to future advances in the market prices of the oils, both international and domestic, is the fact of their recent rises while the market averages were going down.

There ability to buck the trend should bid well for the oils----; should the summer rally materialize.

Such is the reasoning. Were it not for the at least outward hostility of Congress toward the oil companies, oil equity analysts suggest they might be more inclined to view the fossil fuel sector for the long term.

The energy bill of 1975, however, did not generate much confidence for investment in the oils, they point out.

This bill lifted the tariffs on imported oil and reduced the price of crude within our shores.

Moreover, it is noted that some members of the House and Senate are beating the drums for a break-up of the oil industry.

Current interest in the oil industry for the near term comes in part from a firming trend for prices.

Another factor favoring the oils at this time is said to be confidence that new sources of supply will be coming on the near future.

There is the factor of dividend income from the oils too; and a conviction among investors as well as traders that the oils are relatively sound places to one's money at this time.

Equal employment grows in banking

WASHINGTON — Minority and female employment in management and other positions with banks grew significantly during the 1970-75 period, a study released today by the American Bankers Association (ABA) shows.

Employment data supplied by 49 of the nation's 50 largest banks revealed that total minority employment at those banks grew by 15,509 to 70,726 at year-end 1975, a growth from 19.2 per cent to 21.5 per cent of the total workforce.

The total of minority officers and managers, however, almost doubled in the same period from 5 per cent to 9.3 per cent of the bank's employe totals.

The number of female officers and managers grew by nearly three times, from 7,650 to 19,211-- an increase from 14.9 per cent to 26 per cent of the banks' total in that category.

During the same period, total employment at the banks increased by about one- seventh from 286,354 to 326,943.

As a percentage of the banks' total workforce, the number of minority males increased from 6.2 to 7 per cent, while the number of minority females grew from 13 to 14.5 per cent.

In the officers and managers category, the number of minority males grew from 3.6 to 5.5 per cent of the total of all officers and managers, and the percentage of minority females in that category increased from 1.4 to 3.8.

Among professional bank employes, the number of minority persons more than doubled from 6.8 to 12 per cent of the total for the category. Minority females showed the greater percentage increase, moving from 1.9 to 4.5 per cent of the total.

Minority employment in the technician category increased in the five- year period from 15.1 to 21.8 per cent of the total. The number of minority males grew from 12.2 to 14.9 per cent of the technicians, while the number of minority females increased by more than two times from 2.9 per cent to 6.9 per cent.

Overall, black females recorded the greatest relative progress. Between 1970 and 1975 their numbers increased from .7 to 2 per cent of all officers and managers, from 1 to 2.8 per cent of all professional and from 2.1 to 4.5 per cent of all technicians.

The 50 largest banks were chosen for the sample since they employ approximately one-quarter of the total bank work force. Information from one of the 50 is not reported in this study because changes in the bank's structure made the data statistically incompatible.

ABA is the national trade association of the banking industry. Its membership comprises 13,300 banks -- 91 per cent of the nation's total.

IRS warns employers on federal taxes

ST. LOUIS — Richard C. Voskuil, district director of Internal Revenue in St. Louis, reports that there has been a special effort by the IRS to enforce federal tax laws that require employers to withhold money for social security and federal income taxes from employees' wages. The money withheld is a trust fund that must be paid over to the government on a regular basis.

Voskuil said that, across the nation, criminal prosecutions of employers who did not properly deposit funds resulted in 127 convictions or guilty pleas in a one-year period. He said four Missouri employers have been convicted or entered guilty pleas since July 1, 1975.

State agency investigates unemployment benefits

JEFFERSON CITY — The Missouri Division of Employment Security is emphasizing its continued effort to locate people who have collected unemployment insurance benefits illegally and to collect all unemployment insurance taxes due.

The Benefit Payment Control program is organized on a statewide basis. All protests, leads and tips are followed up to determine whether or not benefits have been properly paid. John F. Meystrik, division director, said that frequently we hear about irregularities but the complainants refuse to furnish the names of the people allegedly receiving the illegal payments. Without the specifics, the Division is in no position to take any action.

In a continuing program, wages paid by employers are cross- matched against benefits paid each calendar quarter to locate those who are working and being paid benefits at the same time. If the claimant has illegally drawn benefits while working, overpayments are established and the claimant is required to repay the illegally paid benefits before any future benefits can be paid. The Division also conducts a collection program to collect and restore to the fund amounts found to be overpaid.

In those cases where there have been fraudulent payments, the overpayment is established and the wage credits on which benefits are computed are canceled. This means that the person committing the fraud must have earned additional wages before there is any future eligibility. The cases involving willful fraud are presented to the local authorities for prosecution. In the first four months of this year 356 cases have been referred for prosecution. Once prosecution has been recommended, it becomes the responsibility of the local authorities.

In addition to the Benefit Payment Control program, the Division maintains a vigorous effort in the collection of the tax due under the law from employers. In conjunction with this program, the records of a certain percentage of the employers are audited each year to be sure that workers' wages are properly reported and the correct amount of tax is paid into the Unemployment Trust fund.

Meystrik said that every effort is made to safeguard the fund from which unemployment benefits are paid.

Consumer affairs warns

Beware of illegal pyramid investments

By ALFRED C. SIKES, DIRECTOR
Missouri Department of Consumer Affairs

JEFFERSON CITY — Imagine a plan in which you are told that with a small investment you can earn a 10-fold or larger profit by merely recruiting five other persons to invest in the same plan. In the community you live surely you can find just five more persons to invest by enticing them with the same promise.

It might sound like a nice business opportunity, but it's called a pyramid sales scheme and it's illegal in Missouri.

Take a closer look at this plan; envision yourself as part of a chain in which each person involved must "sell" to five other persons. The person who originates the chain obtains five persons who each involves five others, totaling 25 persons. On the second step each of those 25 investors involves five others, and soon 125 persons are involved. As the multiplier effect takes its toll, in just 10 steps, almost 10 million people--more than twice the population of Missouri--would be involved.

As you now realize, the chances of that happening are zero. What if you enter the chain on the fifth or sixth step as the market begins to become saturated? You might not find five persons so you lose your investment. Or if you do not, someone down the chain does and you contribute to his or her loss. Usually, the only people to make the large profit promised are the originators.

This recently occurred in an incident reported in the news media. The investment involved the purchase of United States savings bonds which were mailed to names on the top of a list. The investor then involved two other persons in the chain and as his name progressed to the top of the list, he received the bonds. Some people may make a profit on the scheme. Though that is possible, someone further down the chain is going to lose his investment.

This same type of scheme has been applied by some businesses who recruit salesmen on the pretense of selling the product they manufacture. The disreputable company recruits salesmen to sell a product, however, after an initial investment, the "salesman" realizes that his job is to recruit other salesmen who must, in turn, recruit others. The salesmen receive commissions for recruiting, but once the market becomes saturated, recruiting becomes difficult. An ever-increasing number of participants are attempting to recruit from an ever-decreasing number of potential investors in a certain area. The company meanwhile profits on the initial investments and pays little in commissions for new recruitments.

This type of scheme is often difficult to recognize. One characteristic that usually gives away a fraudulent scheme is the promise of a quick, windfall profit from a small investment. Remember, there is little chance you will make money on this scheme...and it is illegal in Missouri.

The familiar three-slot coin phone has been relegated to history and the ranks of collectors' items.

Collectors can buy them from the phone company.

A tariff recently approved by the Missouri Public Service Commission allows Southwestern Bell to sell the obsolete multi-slot coin phones as they are replaced by newer single-slot models.

Deloris Hurt, the company's Sikeston manager, said the three-slot coin phones are no longer manufactured. Single-slot models are fast replacing those still in use. That is partly because the single-slot models are designed and built to withstand the onslaught of vandals and thieves more effectively than the older multi-slot phones.

Hurt said that many of the old phones are covered with graffiti and are available in that condition for $85. She said customers can also order the old three-slotters repainted in black, beige or green for $90 or in specia! combinations, such as red, white and blue, for $95.

Noting that the supply is limited, the manager said that the outdated coin phones will be sold on a first come, first served basis. "When they're gone, they're gone," she said.

The manager said customers needn't count on collecting money from their friends who use the old coin phone. She said the coin mechanisms have been disconnected so that money dropped into the slots is returned.

"Customers will own the housing," she said. "The company owns the internal working parts and will maintain the working parts free of charge. Monthly main-line or extension charges will apply."

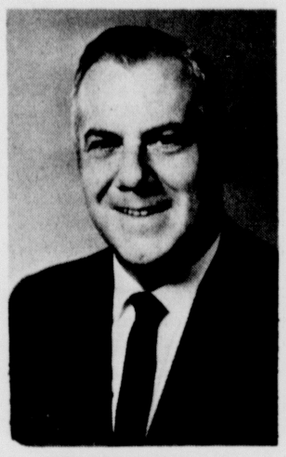
Two receive new appointments

WICKLIFFE — Roy L. Sharp, manager of the Wickliffe paper mill of Westvaco Corporation since its construction was authorized in 1967, is returning to the company's New York office for a new assignment in the Fine Papers Division related to expansion planning.

Harold A. Sutphen, vice president and manager of the Fine Papers Division, said Mr. Sharp will become manager of facilities planning for the division, a job that involves coordinating mill operating and engineering groups in planning for future growth.

Anthony Androski, manager of the company's Tyrone, Pa., mill, a manufacturer of specialty products, will succeed Sharp as manager of the Wickliffe mill. Androski joined Westvaco 21 years ago and has served in a number of administrative and managerial positions in the company's New York headquarters and at the Tyrone mill.

"The growing demand for our papers and the long-term prospect of strength in our markets, combined with the escalating costs of new facilities, places a premium on sound and orderly expansion planning," Mr. Sutphen said in describing Sharp's new position.



Roy L. Sharp

Anthony Androski

Some of the projects currently under consideration, he said, include the modernization of the pulp mill at the company's Luke, Md., mill, rebuilds of the two largest paper machines at that location and expansion of pulp capacity at the Wickliffe mill up to the full capability of the recovery boiler.

Sharp became manager of the Wickliffe mill at the time its construction was authorized in 1967, helped form and develop the organization, and brought the mill through the startup stage to its present levels of operating efficiency.

Prior to that, he was responsible for the studies and recommendations that led to the decision of the Westvaco board of directors to authorize the project.

Holder of a degree in civil engineering from Renesselaer Polytechnic Institute, Sharp joined the company at its Mechanicville, N.Y., mill in 1951 as a technical trainee in construction and maintenance. He moved up to foreman of construction and maintenance and then to superintendent of the same department in 1956.

In 1959 he was promoted to plant engineer at Mechanicville and in the summer of 1964 was transferred to Westvaco's Luke, Md., mill as engineering superintendent. A year later he became project engineer for the Fine Papers Division, headquartered in New York.

Androski has been manager of the Tyrone mill since July 1974 and has had additional responsibility for the overall direction of Westvaco's Edgemate Division and for safeguarding the curtailed facilities at its Williamsburg, Pa., mill since Dec. 1, 1975.

A graduate of Miami University of Ohio with a B.S. degree in business administration, Androski was a senior accountant with Price Waterhouse & Company for six years before becoming associated with Westvaco in 1955 as systems and methods manager in the Comptroller's Department in New York City.

He joined the Tyrone organization in 1959 as commercial superintendent and in 1966 was promoted to administration manager. He was advanced to assistant manager, administration, in 1974 and four months later became Tyrone mill manager.

Study shows recent strength in oils

By CROCKETT SCOTT

Source & Professional traders in St. Louis.

A favorite of Security Exchange Commission registered security analysts in St. Louis is Gulf, with estimated earnings of $4.25 per share for 1976, against $3.60 last year. Annual yield is better than 6 per cent, with a $1.70 per share payout.

Gulf, trading around 26-27, has about the lowest price-earnings ratio--roughly 6--of any of the international oils.

The international oils all are trading near their 1976 highs, but technicians, studying recent strength, speculate that the group could move higher in a relatively short period.

A summer rally may be in the works now, some of their number believe, and the oils---domestics as well as the internationals----along with offshore drilling company equities could benefit, as investment capital shifts away from steels, chemicals and autos.

Analysts note that traders have taken profits in many instances from these latter classifications; and are looking for other equity groups for the fast turn.

Estimated earnings for the international oils are up considerably over last year; though not up to the exceptionally high profit year of 1974.

Exxon, selling around $100 or so per share, earned $13.54 per common share during 1974; eased to $11.19 last year; while analysts are estimating $12.50 for 1976.

The dividend of $5.50, of course, is amply covered, as are the dividends of the other internationals; Mobil, Texaco, Standard of California and Gulf.

Earnings of the domestic oils also will be up over 1975, according to professional estimates.

Standard of Indiana, for instance, is expected to report about $6.75 per share, as compared to $5.36 for 1975. Atlantic Richfield should net $7.25 per share against $6.16. Shell is calculated to report $8.50, with $7.59 recorded during 1975.

Cities' Service should earn $6.00 versus the $5.12 per share last year.

A clue to future advances in the market prices of the oils, both international and domestic, is the fact of their recent rises while the market averages were going down.

There ability to buck the trend should bid well for the oils----; should the summer rally materialize.

Such is the reasoning. Were it not for the at least outward hostility of Congress toward the oil companies, oil equity analysts suggest they might be more inclined to view the fossil fuel sector for the long term.

The energy bill of 1975, however, did not generate much confidence for investment in the oils, they point out.

The person who originates the chain obtains five persons who each involves five others, totaling 25 persons. On the second step each of those 25 investors involves five others, and soon 125 persons are involved. As the multiplier effect takes its toll, in just 10 steps, almost 10 million people--more than twice the population of Missouri--would be involved.

As you now realize, the chances of that happening are zero. What if you enter the chain on the fifth or sixth step as the market begins to become saturated? You might not find five persons so you lose your investment. Or if you do not, someone down the chain does and you contribute to his or her loss. Usually, the only people to make the large profit promised are the originators.

This recently occurred in an incident reported in the news media. The investment involved the purchase of United States savings bonds which were mailed to names on the top of a list. The investor then involved two other persons in the chain and as his name progressed to the top of the list, he received the bonds. Some people may make a profit on the scheme. Though that is possible, someone further down the chain is going to lose his investment.

This same type of scheme has been applied by some businesses who recruit salesmen on the pretense of selling the product they manufacture. The disreputable company recruits salesmen to sell a product, however, after an initial investment, the "salesman" realizes that his job is to recruit other salesmen who must, in turn, recruit others. The salesmen receive commissions for recruiting, but once the market becomes saturated, recruiting becomes difficult. An ever-increasing number of participants are attempting to recruit from an ever-decreasing number of potential investors in a certain area. The company meanwhile profits on the initial investments and pays little in commissions for new recruitments.

This type of scheme is often difficult to recognize. One characteristic that usually gives away a fraudulent scheme is the promise of a quick, windfall profit from a small investment. Remember, there is little chance you will make money on this scheme...and it is illegal in Missouri.

Interstate Brands declares second quarter dividends

KANSAS CITY — At a meeting of the board of directors of Interstate Brands Corporation the regular second-quarter dividend of 20 cents per common share, and $1.20 per share on the preferred, were declared.

Both dividends are payable July 2, 1976, to holders of record June 16, 1976.

Interstate Brands Corporation (NYSE and PCSE symbol IBC) is the nation's third- largest wholesale baking firm and among FORTUNE's top 500 corporations. IBC produces and distributes bread and cake products from 33 plants across the country.

The familiar three-slot coin phone has been relegated to history and the ranks of collectors' items.

Collectors can buy them from the phone company.

A tariff recently approved by the Missouri Public Service Commission allows Southwestern Bell to sell the obsolete multi-slot coin phones as they are replaced by newer single-slot models.

Deloris Hurt, the company's Sikeston manager, said the three-slot coin phones are no longer manufactured. Single-slot models are fast replacing those still in use. That is partly because the single-slot models are designed and built to withstand the onslaught of vandals and thieves more effectively than the older multi-slot phones.

Hurt said that many of the old phones are covered with graffiti and are available in that condition for $85. She said customers can also order the old three-slotters repainted in black, beige or green for $90 or in special combinations, such as red, white and blue, for $95.

Noting that the supply is limited, the manager said that the outdated coin phones will be sold on a first come, first served basis. "When they're gone, they're gone," she said.

The manager said customers needn't count on collecting money from their friends who use the old coin phone. She said the coin mechanisms have been disconnected so that money dropped into the slots is returned.

"Customers will own the housing," she said. "The company owns the internal working parts and will maintain the working parts free of charge. Monthly main-line or extension charges will apply."

Amid the clamor of criticism about the CIA, FBI, imperialist aggression, and the capitalist system, there is a happy and positive note emerging as the United States celebrates its 200th anniversary. The job of relocating approximately 140,000 South Vietnamese refugees has about been completed. And 600,000 Cubans, too, were resettled in the United States.

Americans took in the Vietnamese and Cubans, not because of a sense of guilt for America's involvement in war, but because of compassion for fellow human beings in need. It is the kind of response that has characterized the American people across the years. That Statute of Liberty still stands tall in New York's harbor, still proclaiming to the world the words:

"Give me your tired, your poor, Your huddled masses yearningto breathe free, The wretched refuse of your teeming shore, Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me: I life my lamp beside the golden door."

SCOFFLAWS IN SCHOOL

By Howard Flieger

End of the school year should ease the worry over student violence for a while.

But the problem itself isn't gone. Like the schools, it is only in summer recess.

Study after study shows hundreds of public schools are little more than jungles of crime that is routinely brutal and, too often, deadly.

The National Education Association reports that in the past year pupils committed 100 homicides, 9,000 rapes, 12,000 armed robberies, 270,000 burglaries, and did more than a half billion dollars worth of damage to school property.

A survey financed by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration describes violence in the schools as a "serious and costly national problem" that "warrants a national effort" at correction.

A national effort in what direction? That is the question. How can schools that have become battlegrounds of disorder be restored to quiet corridors of learning?

Representative Mario Biaggi, a New York Democrat, has proposed federal funds for school districts so they can set up security systems and hire guards if necessary. Schools would be required to report violence and vandalism to the police.

That may be a way to bring order out of chaos, but security precautions haven't been able to put an end to student crime so far.

Jesse Jackson, an outspoken civil- rights advocate, has a different idea. In an interview with columnist William Raspberry of the Washington Post some time ago, he put the blame on parents. In his words:

"What urban education needs is not more money but more parents willing to give their children care, motivation and chastisement — the will to learn.

"Do that, and these other things will become less of an issue — things like budgets, or such nonsense as 'black-children can't learn from white teachers.'"

There is another interesting experiment, a program developed by the American Institute for Character Education. It is designed as an aid for teachers and is based on a theory that school-age children who are taught to consider the likely consequences of their behavior will behave themselves.

The course covers kindergarten through the fifth grade, and has been tested in more than 500 schools.

Before character education was introduced, said the principal, Beatric M. Bowles, "the building resemebled a school in a riot area. Many, many windows had been broken and the glass replaced with Masonite.

"When school opened, most of the pupils were rude, discourteous and insolent to members of the faculty... The children had no school pride."

"Since September 1970, there has been less than $100 of glass breakage, and this has been accidental ... Students are now respectful and co-operative with the teachers, and there is a feeling of one for all and all for one. The building is much cleaner."

With few exceptions, physical suppression hasn't checked the spread of violence.

Maybe it is up to the parents, as Jesse Jackson says. Maybe the answer is to make students aware of the consequences of their acts, as under the Character Education course. Perhaps it is a matter of example.

If the latter is the case, it is something to ponder. For instance, teachers' strikes in defiance of the law — as many are — can hardly instill in schoolchildren a respect for law and order. If teachers can scoff at society's rules of conduct, why can't students?

POPPYCOCK!

As everyone who owns a home knows, the cost of keeping that home insured constantly rises as its replacement value goes up. The same is true of industries with plants and facilities that must someday be replaced at inflated prices. This simple analogy shows why allegedly "high" profits enjoyed by many companies are just numbers with little meaning.

The top official of a leading oil company has shown what would happen if "the rosecolored glasses" through which people view profits were removed. "In 1972," he reports, "the 20 largest U.S. oil companies had net fixed domestic assets of approximately $40 billion, and they reported after-tax earnings of $3.4 billion, giving them a return on equity of about 9.5 percent. If price-level (replacement cost) accounting had been practiced taking inflation into account, the costs of these assets would have been restated upward to about $55 billion, while after-tax earnings would have shrunk in real terms to about $2.3 billion--yielding a return on equity less than five percent, or only half that which was reported."

Thus, considering the impact of inflation on the cost of meeting tomorrow's petroleum needs, profits of oil companies today are anything but high or exorbitant--especially when it is realized that the goal of becoming relatively self-sufficient in energy by 1985 will require an investment of between $600 billion and $1 trillion in the next decade. As the oil company executives observes, this is like talking about financing the equivalent of two Apollo programs each year over the next 10 years. The proposal to roll back petroleum prices, while telling people in the same breath that energy needs can and must be met, can only be classed as political and economic poppycock of the highest order.

TAKE A CLOSER LOOK

Part of the reason that business and industry have been unable to get the story of enterprise across to the public can be laid at the doors of legislators and educators who have devoted their careers to telling voters and young people how lousy American businessmen are and how selfish private enterprise exploits consumers. The end result has been a slow erosion of confidence in the entire American system.

Following the pattern of the past, it is likely that industry will continue to be blamed for every crisis. Each difficulty will be seized upon by those who advocate government ownership as a solution to give the American people the illusion of better days to come and conceal, in many cases, the past mistakes of government. Politicians bearing gifts should be suspect as never before.

POLITICAL HEALTH CARE

Recently House Majority Leader "Tip" O'Neill announced that Democrats in Congress would be making a major effort to pass National Health Insurance legislation this year. Whether they will be able to go ahead with such plans in the face of the President's Catastrophic Coverage plan is difficult to tell. At any rate the prospect of a National Health plan is sufficiently close and unpleasant to taxpayers to warrant taking some steps to head it off.

H.C. Gordon of the U.S. Industrial Council cleverly compared National Health Insurance plans to an unnecessary operation which--though successful in almost every detail--has one minor flaw: the patient dies. It's a close analogy. No matter how expertly the system is applied, the results are the same--deterioration of health care services.

National Health Insurance is itself a somewhat misleading phrase. None of the twenty different bills which have been introduced in Congress in the past two years would insure anybody's health. All that these programs intend to do is to set up a different system of payment for health care services--not improve the systems themselves. And therein lies the tale.

The common ingredient in the various Health Insurance proposals now before Congress is that they would shift the burden of being sick (or hypochondriacal) from the individual to the society at large. But, once the financial burden of illness is removed, so too is an important incentive for staying healthy. While it is difficult to speculate on such matters, the ultimate effect of National Health Insurance may be to make people less healthy than they might otherwise be.

To a greater extent than most people realize, health problems can be avoided. Illness is not inevitable. As a previous study reported, it has been shown that a persons' life expectancy at age 55 depends more on living habits--proper exercise, diets, etc.--than upon medical services. The plain truth is that Americans' health problems are not a result of inadequate health care institutions. Americans eat too much, drink too much, smoke too much, and get too little exercise.

A system of National Health Insurance would not attempt to deal with any of these problems. Instead, the proposals now before Congress would--to a greater or lesser extend depending upon the particular bill--shift the burden of medical care onto the general taxpayer. What this means is that those people who keep themselves healthy will be subsidizing those people who don't.

This aspect of National Health Insurance may be unfair, but it alone is probably not unbearable. The unbearable aspect of National Health Insurance systems is economic. When government acts as sole producer or sole purchaser of any goods or services either the costs go through the ceiling or the service goes through the floor--or both.

The health care industry never has been a model of free enterprise. Stiff regulations and licensing requirements have always limited free competition and kept prices artificially high. Comfortably insulated from the rigors of competition, doctors and hospitals have been able to charge whatever the patients could bear. As more and more Americans turned to health insurance plans (9 out of 10 are now covered), the price for medical services rose, since the insurers had less ability to effect costs than the patients themselves.

It was Medicare and Medicaid which really took the lid off health care costs. Per-day hospital costs have nearly doubled in the past 5 years, thanks largely to the Medicare program. Physicians' fees have also risen proportionally. Doctors' incomes have risen at a rate 7 per cent greater than before Medicare was begun.

The best way to insure adequate medical services at affordable cost is not to politicize and bureaucratize the health care industry. Rather, it is to remove the obstacles which stand in the way of competition and investment. The FTC recently took a cautious step in that direction by proposing an end to the ban on advertising by Doctors. Government should also consider a more flexible licensing system which would allow non-MD's to treat routine, simple and common ailments.

Just as with other services, freeflowing competition assures that consumers get the most for their money.

In the spring of 1945 American soldiers going into Frankfurt, Germany, saw nothing but flattened buildings in a section four or five miles square in the heart of the city. Nothing stood higher above the ground than the debris to which the vast section had been reduced by American bombers---

The question is, where will this money come from, and the answer is from earnings retained by electric companies and, to a large degree, from investment funds provided by individual people and by organizations such as life insurance companies and banks. The problem is that investors lack confidence in the ability of many basic industries, including electric utility companies, to deliver an adequate return on invested capital. The crux of the matter is that regulatory authorities have not permitted rates for electric service to keep up with the cost of producing it. And, in just the past year, those costs have gone through the roof--including a fourfold increase in crude oil prices. It should be remembered that it is not utility company management that demands higher rates: it is the people and the organizations who put up the money to build electric plants; it is employees who require higher wages; it is suppliers who must charge more for the fuel and equipment which a utility company uses.

If Project Independence is ever to be successful, investing money in companies that produce energy will have to become as profitable as investing it in any other enterprise. In other words, the cost of all forms of energy must go up. In the case of electricity, power consumers must recognize the need for higher rates, and regulatory authorities will have to act in accordance with this recognition.

NO LONGER A REASON

It is easy to view oil price increases as unwarranted and aimed simply at pouring more dollars into the coffers of the U.S. oil industry. But, in reality, more revenue and better profit levels alone will bring more development of domestic energy resources. And only that can move the U.S. closer to the energy self-sufficiency that is proclaimed to be a first priority national goal.

An enlightening report on an 8-month study of oil production by the U.S. General Accounting Office shows the relationship between last December's crude oil price increase and drilling activity. For example, during 1974, it is estimated that the additional funds will be largely responsible for a 24.5 percent hike in the number of drilling rigs operatin in 1974 as compared with 1973. A total of 1,540 were at work late in August, 1974, as contrasted with 1,237 a year earlier. New drilling applications in Texas alone have increased 49 per cent between the first quarter of 1973 and the first quarter of 1974. And a spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute further notes that overall domestic drilling for oil has increased dramatically since the price boost went into effect. Increased drilling, followed by accelerated oil production, will release more energy for use and lessen the chances of a full-scale energy crisis.

There is no reason for the United States to remain precariously dependent upon the whims of oil-producing nations when intensified development of domestic natural resources is within our grasp. Clearly, the U.S. oil industry must be allowed to generate capital and proceed with all speed to increase production of domestic supplies. Our future as an independent Republic is at stake.

HOW FORD WILL WIN IT

WASHINGTON— I'm going to go out on a limb and predict that Gerald Ford will be the Republican presidential candidate. I might not have done this a week ago, but now that the Ford campaign people have shifted their strategy, it is a sure thing.

The trick is to keep President Ford from campaigning for the job. If you delegate-watchers out there recall, President Ford went into Missouri to capture Republican delegates from Ronald Reagan. He got exactly one delegate to Reagan's 18, and the headlines all over the country announced that Mr. Ford was walloped badly by Reagan.

Then came Iowa. Originally President Ford was going to go to Iowa and appear in front of the Republican Caucus live and in color against Ronald Reagan. But fortunately events in the Middle East forced him to cancel the trip, and the President stayed in Washington to oversee the evacuation of American from Beirut. He sent in his place Ms. Ford. Without the President there, Ford won 19 delegates to Reagan's 17, a result not lost on Mr. Ford's campaign strategists.

After the Iowa results were in, the Ford Brain Trust met in Washington to discuss how the President could beat Reagan in Kansas City. It went like this:

"We have to keep the President in Washington during the Republican convention."

"How do we do that?"

"There has to be a crisis of such importance that he will have no choice but to remain inthe White House and direct it personally."

"Yeh, but how do we know there will be a crisis in August of that gravity?"

"Call Kissinger."

"Henry, this is Rogers Morton. Are you expecting a crisis in August? ... You're expecting a lot of them? ... Can you be more specific? South Africa? The Middle East? South America? The Far East? India? You mean we can have our choice? Well, what we've got in mind is a small crisis that could become a big one unless the President handles it personally ... Something like the Mayaguez or Beirut ... We'd like it about August 16 and to finish on August 19 ... No, Henry, we don't want a confrontation with the Soviets ... That's too big a crisis ... Panama? That's not bad. A small crisis in Panama which the President could handle through skillful diplomacy rather than force would be perfect ... Could you set it up? ... I'm sure the Panamanians would co-operate, particularly when you tell them it will help get Mr. Ford nominated ... Thanks a lot, Henry. We'll count on you."

"Okay, so we have a crisis in Panama. Who do we send to the convention in the President's place?"

"Betty Ford and Susan. They'll explain that although the President is interested in the nomination the country must come first. We could have the President speak to the convention from the situation room in the White House, with the Joint Chiefs of Staff standing behind him."

"It's beautiful. Regan will go out of his gourd when Mr. Ford doesn't show up. He knows he doesn't have a chance against Betty."

"Suppose the President doesn't buy it and insists on going to Kansas City. What do we do then?"

"We'll prove to him it's the only way he can get the nomination. We'll show him that everywhere he hasn't campaigned he's won, and every place he's showed up he's lost -- with Michigan being the only exception. Besides, the President enjoys a crisis more than he does a Republican convention."

"Doesn't everybody?"

Militant Black Workers:
Unions threaten crippling of New York, Philadelphia Transit Health Services beginning July 4

NEW YORK— There may be more public transit on Mars when Viking 1 lands on the red planet July 4 than there will be in Philadelphia that fireworks day -- if the Transport Workers Union (TWU) strikes all subways, buses and trolleys as it threatens.

This militant union won't be fazed by the illustrious celebrants -- be they British royalty or plebeian President. The TWU slowed vital Philadelphia transit for days during World War II, the record reveals.

But there's far more significance here during this bicentennial salute than the enforced trudging of visiting millions. It is, in fact, the story of these times. It marks the thundering coming of age of the black worker.

The minor theme of this major mode is the demand of the transit unions -- now with a strong black constituency -- that some 345 workers (last hired first fired) be retained instead of furloughed. The Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority is broke. It was about to go payless. Then it got $5 million from the city.

Finally it decided to trim some services and lay off some workers. Result: rapid-fire threats of strikes.

Should there be a Philadelphia transit paralysis that freedom day, there may well be similar action in New York later in the week -- and if real later that week, it bumps right into the Democratic National Convention. There was a subway and bus strike here during the early days of 1966. All New York became a vast megalopolitan parking lot. Delegates would need to clamber over the tops of cars to get to Madison Square Garden if the New York TWU strikes.

The issue here is the demand for implementation by the Transit Authority of an April 1 agreement to grant the local's 35,000 members an uncapped COLA (Cost of Living Allowance). Now Secretary of the Treasury William Simon has told the city's rapidly aging fathers - no go. No fringes. All wages in any fashion are to be frozen, or no federal funds.

Quietly the union chiefs are awaiting the first paychecks scheduled to contain some COLA. These increased payments are due July 7 or 8.

This is virtually a unanimous sentiment. Thus it cuts across ethnic lines. But the transit union's membership now is predominantly black and Spanish-surnamed workers. Gone are the days when at midnight the late union chief Mike Quill could phone the mayor and their buddies on the special transit mediation board and make a deal which would keep his followers from striking.

Gone are the days of the old civil service stereotypes. The new proletariat is sweeping into the leadership of, or heavily influencing, the quasi-public fields, too. There is, for example, the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, District 1199 here. It is led by the ultra-militant veteran Leon Davis. But even this radical leader is merely a step or so ahead of his hard-pressing rank andfile -- some 42,000 employes, most of them black and Puerto Rican, of 52 affiliates of the League of Voluntary Hospitals. These include such prestigious institutions as Columbia-Presbyterian, St. Claire's and Mount Sinai. There are some municipal hospitals but the League's 52 medical centers are the foundation of this city's health service.

Well, Davis tells me he is set to send his followers into the street on July 5. The hospitals will be blocked off by mass picketing. In the past they've been rough -- administrators' offices invaded, staff and deliveries cut off, and patient care paralyzed.

Though the voluntary hospitals are not in the public sector de jure -- de facto they can't survive without public money. Just ask your local Protestant, Catholic or Jewish charitable federations. Now there just aren't any more funds available for wage increases in any fashion. Medicaid has been frozen. And the governor has ordered his insurance commissioner not to permit an increase in Blue Shield rates.

Actually Davis is demanding a bottom line of 7.5 per cent increase -- somewhere skyward of $60 million over two years. So he says he'll strike that sticky week.

This tale of two cities is the story of many urban centers. You'll hear more of it when the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists meets in Cleveland Sept. 3 for itsfifth annual convention. The delegates will shout, at that politically strategic moment, for "a more effective voice and a substantive role in the development and implementation of local and national labor union policies."

This nation now is ripping through the era to which historians will refer as the moment when there began a changing of the guard and color in American labor leadership.

Amid the clamor of criticism about the CIA, FBI, imperialist aggression, and the capitalist system, there is a happy and positive note emerging as the United States celebrates its 200th anniversary. The job of relocating approximately 140,000 South Vietnamese refugees has about been completed. And 600,000 Cubans, too, were resettled in the United States.

Americans took in the Vietnamese and Cubans, not because of a sense of guilt for America's involvement in war, but because of compassion for fellow human beings in need. It is the kind of response that has characterized the American people across the years. That Statute of Liberty still stands tall in New York's harbor, still proclaiming to the world the words:

"Give me your tired, your poor, Your huddled masses yearningto breathe free, The wretched refuse of your teeming shore, Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me: I life my lamp beside the golden door."

SCOFFLAWS IN SCHOOL

By Howard Flieger

But the problem itself isn't gone. Like the schools, it is only in summer recess.

Study after study shows hundreds of public schools are little more than jungles of crime that is routinely brutal and, too often, deadly.

The National Education Association reports that in the past year pupils committed 100 homicides, 9,000 rapes, 12,000 armed robberies, 270,000 burglaries, and did more than a half billion dollars worth of damage to school property.

A survey financed by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration describes violence in the schools as a "serious and costly national problem" that "warrants a national effort" at correction.

A national effort in what direction? That is the question. How can schools that have become battlegrounds of disorder be restored to quiet corridors of learning?

Representative Mario Biaggi, a New York Democrat, has proposed federal funds for school districts so they can set up security systems and hire guards if necessary. Schools would be required to report violence and vandalism to the police.

That may be a way to bring order out of chaos, but security precautions haven't been able to put an end to student crime so far.

Jesse Jackson, an outspoken civil- rights advocate, has a different idea. In an interview with columnist William Raspberry of the Washington Post some time ago, he put the blame on parents. In his words:

"What urban education needs is not more money but more parents willing to give their children care, motivation and chastisement — the will to learn.

"Do that, and these other things will become less of an issue — things like budgets, or such nonsense as 'black children can't learn from white teachers.'"

There is another interesting experiment, a program developed by the American Institute for Character Education. It is designed as an aid for teachers and is based on a theory that school-age children who are taught to consider the likely consequences of their behavior will behave themselves.

The course covers kindergarten through the fifth grade, and has been tested in more than 500 schools.

Before character education was introduced, said the principal, Beatric M. Bowles, "the building resemebled a school in a riot area. Many, many windows had been broken and the glass replaced with Masonite.

"When school opened, most of the pupils were rude, discourteous and insolent to members of the faculty... The children had no school pride."

"Since September 1970, there has been less than $100 of glass breakage, and this has been accidental ... Students are now respectful and co-operative with the teachers, and there is a feeling of one for all and all for one. The building is much cleaner."

With few exceptions, physical suppression hasn't checked the spread of violence.

Maybe it is up to the parents, as Jesse Jackson says. Maybe the answer is to make students aware of the consequences of their acts, as under the Character Education course. Perhaps it is a matter of example.

If the latter is the case, it is something to ponder. For instance, teachers' strikes in defiance of the law — as many are — can hardly instill in schoolchildren a respect for law and order. If teachers can scoff at society's rules of conduct, why can't students?

POPPYCOCK!

As everyone who owns a home knows, the cost of keeping that home insured constantly rises as its replacement value goes up. The same is true of industries with plants and facilities that must someday be replaced at inflated prices. This simple analogy shows why allegedly "high" profits enjoyed by many companies are just numbers with little meaning.

The top official of a leading oil company has shown what would happen if "the rosecolored glasses" through which people view profits were removed. "In 1972," he reports, "the 20 largest U.S. oil companies had net fixed domestic assets of approximately $40 billion, and they reported after-tax earnings of $3.4 billion, giving them a return on equity of about 9.5 percent. If price-level (replacement cost) accounting had been practiced taking inflation into account, the costs of these assets would have been restated upward to about $55 billion, while after-tax earnings would have shrunk in real terms to about $2.3 billion--yielding a return on equity less than five percent, or only half that which was reported."

Thus, considering the impact of inflation on the cost of meeting tomorrow's petroleum needs, profits of oil companies today are anything but high or exorbitant--especially when it is realized that the goal of becoming relatively self-sufficient in energy by 1985 will require an investment of between $600 billion and $1 trillion in the next decade. As the oil company executives observes, this is like talking about financing the equivalent of two Apollo programs each year over the next 10 years. The proposal to roll back petroleum prices, while telling people in the same breath that energy needs can and must be met, can only be classed as political and economic poppycock of the highest order.

TAKE A CLOSER LOOK

Part of the reason that business and industry have been unable to get the story of enterprise across to the public can be laid at the doors of legislators and educators who have devoted their careers to telling voters and young people how lousy American businessmen are and how selfish private enterprise exploits consumers. The end result has been a slow erosion of confidence in the entire American system.

Following the pattern of the past, it is likely that industry will continue to be blamed for every crisis. Each difficulty will be seized upon by those who advocate government ownership as a solution to give the American people the illusion of better days to come and conceal, in many cases, the past mistakes of government. Politicians bearing gifts should be suspect as never before.

POLITICAL HEALTH CARE

Recently House Majority Leader "Tip" O'Neill announced that Democrats in Congress would be making a major effort to pass National Health Insurance legislation this year. Whether they will be able to go ahead with such plans in the face of the President's Catastrophic Coverage plan is difficult to tell. At any rate the prospect of a National Health plan is sufficiently close and unpleasant to taxpayers to warrant taking some steps to head it off.

H.C. Gordon of the U.S. Industrial Council cleverly compared National Health Insurance plans to an unnecessary operation which--though successful in almost every detail--has one minor flaw: the patient dies. It's a close analogy. No matter how expertly the system is applied, the results are the same--deterioration of health care services.

National Health Insurance is itself a somewhat misleading phrase. None of the twenty different bills which have been introduced in Congress in the past two years would insure anybody's health. All that these programs intend to do is to set up a different system of payment for health care services--not improve the systems themselves. And therein lies the tale.

The common ingredient in the various Health Insurance proposals now before Congress is that they would shift the burden of being sick (or hypochondriacal) from the individual to the society at large. But, once the financial burden of illness is removed, so too is an important incentive for staying healthy. While it is difficult to speculate on such matters, the ultimate effect of National Health Insurance may be to make people less healthy than they might otherwise be.

To a greater extent than most people realize, health problems can be avoided. Illness is not inevitable. As a previous study reported, it has been shown that a persons' life expectancy at age 55 depends more on living habits--proper exercise, diets, etc.--than upon medical services. The plain truth is that Americans' health problems are not a result of inadequate health care institutions. Americans eat too much, drink too much, smoke too much, and get too little exercise.

A system of National Health Insurance would not attempt to deal with any of these problems. Instead, the proposals now before Congress would--to a greater or lesser extend depending upon the particular bill--shift the burden of medical care onto the general taxpayer. What this means is that those people who keep themselves healthy will be subsidizing those people who don't.

This aspect of National Health Insurance may be unfair, but it alone is probably not unbearable. The unbearable aspect of National Health Insurance systems is economic. When government acts as sole producer or sole purchaser of any goods or services either the costs go through the ceiling or the service goes through the floor--or both.

The health care industry never has been a model of free enterprise. Stiff regulations and licensing requirements have always limited free competition and kept prices artificially high. Comfortably insulated from the rigors of competition, doctors and hospitals have been able to charge whatever the patients could bear. As more and more Americans turned to health insurance plans (9 out of 10 are now covered), the price for medical services rose, since the insurers had less ability to effect costs than the patients themselves.

It was Medicare and Medicaid which really took the lid off health care costs. Per-day hospital costs have nearly doubled in the past 5 years, thanks largely to the Medicare program. Physicians' fees have also risen proportionally. Doctors' incomes have risen at a rate 7 per cent greater than before Medicare was begun.

The best way to insure adequate medical services at affordable cost is not to politicize and bureaucratize the health care industry. Rather, it is to remove the obstacles which stand in the way of competition and investment. The FTC recently took a cautious step in that direction by proposing an end to the ban on advertising by Doctors. Government should also consider a more flexible licensing system which would allow non-MD's to treat routine, simple and common ailments.

Just as with other services, freeflowing competition assures that consumers get the most for their money.

"How do we do that?"

"There has to be a crisis of such importance that he will have no choice but to remain inthe White House and direct it personally."

"Yeh, but how do we know there will be a crisis in August of that gravity?"

"Call Kissinger."

"Henry, this is Rogers Morton. Are you expecting a crisis in August? ... You're expecting a lot of them? ... Can you be more specific? South Africa? The Middle East? South America? The Far East? India? You mean we can have our choice? Well, what we've got in mind is a small crisis that could become a big one unless the President handles it personally ... Something like the Mayaguez or Beirut ... We'd like it about August 16 and to finish on August 19 ... No, Henry, we don't want a confrontation with the Soviets ... That's too big a crisis ... Panama? That's not bad. A small crisis in Panama which the President could handle through skillful diplomacy rather than force would be perfect ... Could you set it up? ... I'm sure the Panamanians would co-operate, particularly when you tell them it will help get Mr. Ford nominated ... Thanks a lot, Henry. We'll count on you."

"Okay, so we have a crisis in Panama. Who do we send to the convention in the President's place?"

"Betty Ford and Susan. They'll explain that although the President is interested in the nomination the country must come first. We could have the President speak to the convention from the situation room in the White House, with the Joint Chiefs of Staff standing behind him."

"It's beautiful. Regan will go out of his gourd when Mr. Ford doesn't show up. He knows he doesn't have a chance against Betty."

"Suppose the President doesn't buy it and insists on going to Kansas City. What do we do then?"

"We'll prove to him it's the only way he can get the nomination. We'll show him that everywhere he hasn't campaigned he's won, and every place he's showed up he's lost -- with Michigan being the only exception. Besides, the President enjoys a crisis more than he does a Republican convention."

"Doesn't everybody?"

Militant Black Workers:

NEW YORK— There may be more public transit on Mars when Viking 1 lands on the red planet July 4 than there will be in Philadelphia that fireworks day -- if the Transport Workers Union (TWU) strikes all subways, buses and trolleys as it threatens.

This militant union won't be fazed by the illustrious celebrants -- be they British royalty or plebeian President. The TWU slowed vital Philadelphia transit for days during World War II, the record reveals.

But there's far more significance here during this bicentennial salute than the enforced trudging of visiting millions. It is, in fact, the story of these times. It marks the thundering coming of age of the black worker.

The minor theme of this major mode is the demand of the transit unions -- now with a strong black constituency -- that some 345 workers (last hired first fired) be retained instead of furloughed. The Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority is broke. It was about to go payless. Then it got $5 million from the city.

Finally it decided to trim some services and lay off some workers. Result: rapid-fire threats of strikes.

Should there be a Philadelphia transit paralysis that freedom day, there may well be similar action in New York later in the week -- and if real later that week, it bumps right into the Democratic National Convention. There was a subway and bus strike here during the early days of 1966. All New York became a vast megalopolitan parking lot. Delegates would need to clamber over the tops of cars to get to Madison Square Garden if the New York TWU strikes.

The issue here is the demand for implementation by the Transit Authority of an April 1 agreement to grant the local's 35,000 members an uncapped COLA (Cost of Living Allowance). Now Secretary of the Treasury William Simon has told the city's rapidly aging fathers -- no go. No fringes. All wages in any fashion are to be frozen, or no federal funds.

Quietly the union chiefs are awaiting the first paychecks scheduled to contain some COLA. These increased payments are due July 7 or 8.

This is virtually a unanimous sentiment. Thus it cuts across ethnic lines. But the transit union's membership now is predominantly black and Spanish-surnamed workers. Gone are the days when at midnight the late union chief Mike Quill could phone the mayor and their buddies on the special transit mediation board and make a deal which would keep his followers from striking.

Gone are the days of the old civil service stereotypes. The new proletariat is sweeping into the leadership of, or heavily influencing, the quasi-public fields, too. There is, for example, the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, District 1199 here. It is led by the ultra-militant veteran Leon Davis. But even this radical leader is merely a step or so ahead of his hard-pressing rank andfile -- some 42,000 employes, most of them black and Puerto Rican, of 52 affiliates of the League of Voluntary Hospitals. These include such prestigious institutions as Columbia-Presbyterian, St. Claire's and Mount Sinai. There are some municipal hospitals but the League's 52 medical centers are the foundation of this city's health service.

Well, Davis tells me he is set to send his followers into the street on July 5. The hospitals will be blocked off by mass picketing. In the past they've been rough -- administrators' offices invaded, staff and deliveries cut off, and patient care paralyzed.

Though the voluntary hospitals are not in the public sector de jure -- de facto they can't survive without public money. Just ask your local Protestant, Catholic or Jewish charitable federations. Now there just aren't any more funds available for wage increases in any fashion. Medicaid has been frozen. And the governor has ordered his insurance commissioner not to permit an increase in Blue Shield rates.

Actually Davis is demanding a bottom line of 7.5 per cent increase -- somewhere skyward of $60 million over two years. So he says he'll strike that sticky week.

This tale of two cities is the story of many urban centers. You'll hear more of it when the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists meets in Cleveland Sept. 3 for itsfifth annual convention. The delegates will shout, at that politically strategic moment, for "a more effective voice and a substantive role in the development and implementation of local and national labor union policies."

This nation now is ripping through the era to which historians will refer as the moment when there began a changing of the guard and color in American labor leadership.

The service reported Tuesday there were 1,857 million bushels of corn in storage in Missouri as of June 1. That is an increase of 24 per cent above last year but a two per cent decrease below 1974.

As of June 1, there were 551 million bushels of soybean stocks in storage, an increase of 30 per cent from a year ago and up 23 per cent from two years ago.

There were 207 million bushels of old crop oat stocks in storage June 1. This was seven per cent less than 1975 and a third less from 1974, the service said.

The service also announced that the date of the mid year report had been changed from July 1 to June 1.

Most crop planting is over for the area

By KENNETH VOWELS
ASCS director

BENTON — Crop planting for the most part is now completed in Scott County with the exception of after-wheat beans and farmers are visiting the county Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service office to report their acres.

Although cotton is the only crop that must be reported this year, we are accepting reports of other crops as farmers visit the office.

Measurement service is available to farmers again this year as an aid in determining exact crop acres. Upon request, a representative of the ASCS office will visit the farm and measure the crop acres designated by the producer. Measurement Service not only provides farmers with accurate figures for reporting crop acres, it also is a valuable tool of farm management in that it provides a record of crops, acres, and field locations for future reference.

The cost of measurement service is $10 per farm, plus 15 cents an acre. Farmers should contact the county ASCS office in Benton for details.

State shows increase in hog population

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service says the state followed a national trend with the number of hogs and pigs increasing from last year but below the number in 1974.

There were 3.3 million hogs and pigs on Missouri farms as of June 1, the service said Tuesday. This is 10 per cent above last year but 21 per cent below June 1, 1974.

There were an estimated 52.6 million hogs and pigs on U.S. farms, which is nine per cent above 1975 and 11 per cent down from 1974.

From December 1975 to June 1976, about 390,000 sows farrowed averaging 7.36 pigs a litter, slightly above the national average, and produced a pig crop of 2.87 million. About 330,000 sows produced 2.36 million pigs a year earlier.

Missouri farmers plan to have 420,000 sows farrowed from June to November with 190,000 sows farrowing during June, July and August and 230,000 farrowing during September, October and November.

This compares to the national expectations of 5.8 million sows farrowing from June to November. About 42.1 million pigs were expected to be produced based on these figures, which is an increase of 18 per cent from the same period in 1975.

Epidemiologist says swine birth defects are hard to pinpoint

COLUMBIA — Swine birth defects occur throughout the swine raising areas of Missouri, and it isn't easy to pin point their cause, a University of Missouri epidemiologist veterinarian said here.

Speaking at the 10th annual Conference in Trace Substances in Environmental Health, Lloyd Selby told how he recently worked with Ron Tidball, soils specialist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Denver, to see if they could find any relationship of soil elements to swine birth defects.

Generally the could, said Selby, "but when you get to specific cause-effect relationships, it gets a bit hairy.

"I believe we can predict levels of birth defects if we know the levels of certain micronutrients in the soil. However, we can do this only on a statewide basis, not on a particular farm.

"There are a whole host of factors involved: the relationship of one micronutrient to another, the weather, individual susceptibility of the animals, etc."

Selby said farmers sometimes have problems with birth defects, simply because of the sheer numbers of animals they raise. But if the level of birth defects exceeds five per cent, "they have a problem and should seek help."

The last two years, Selby has found several farms with epidemics caused by toxic plants, especially black cherries, tobacco stalks, and poison hemlock.

"On one farm, hogs had access to tobacco stalks for years, but had avoided them," Selby related. "Then, for some reason, the stalks became appetizing one year. They chewed them like cuds of tobacco and spit them out." The result was an epidemic. The level of birth defects went up to 70 per thousand--more than 10 times the average.

There are 200 to 300 toxic plants in the state. Some aren't a problem until they are sprayed with a herbicide. Then, for some reason, they become appetizing to animals and problems begin.

Selby's research showed that most birth defect problems are the result of "natural environmental factors--not the fault of the farmer's husbandry.

In the study of the relationship of soil elements and swine birth defects, Selby said a number of elements were related to the defects but phosphorus seemed to be the most important.

For example, phosphorus deficiency results in weak bone structure and contributes to breeding problems.

The phosphorus-calcium relationship is also a problem. The ratio should be almost 1 to 1. "A deficiency of one may enhance an excess of the other, causing problems," noted Selby.

He emphasized, however, that there were few clear-cut, cause-effect relationships between specific mineral deficiencies and birth defects.

"Statistically, we can draw general conclusions " he said. "But biologically, they sometimes don't work out that way when you get down to specifics.

"The best way for a farmer to prevent these is to use good husbandry, good breeding techniques, good record keeping, and good management."

BLOOMFIELD — Controlling cocklebur in soybeans during the first month of the life of the bean crop is the key to minimizing soybean yield losses caused by this weed pest. In addition the cocklebur is much easier to control at this early stage.

According to results of research conducted in Arkansas in which cocklebur infestations up to three cocklebur plants per foot of row were involved, no yield loss was suffered where cocklebur was controlled within four weeks after the beans came up. Yield reductions began about four weeks after beans came up and increased rapidly until beans were 12 weeks old, reaching maximum yield losses at this stage. Approximately 50 per cent of the yield reduction had occurred by the time the beans began blooming at eight to ten weeks of age.

If we consider these results in comparison with weed control practices used in soybeans, it seems to tell us something about why cocklebur is such a problem in bean fields in this area. Cocklebur in soybean fields are not generally controlled during the first four weeks of the life of the bean crop in this area.

In many cases, cocklebur are not controlled until the weeds get larger than the beans after maximum yield loss has been suffered. If controlled before this late stage, it is only after considerable yield reduction has been suffered by the soybean crop. Very often, bean yields are further reduced by herbicide damage to the crop when cocklebur control is attempted during the later stages.

How can cocklebur control be accomplished during the first month of the life of the soybean crop? A combination of control practices will be necessary and methods used should vary with the conditions involved.

Metribuzin (Sencor or Lexone) is the most effective herbicide recommended as a preemergence treatment for cocklebur control. Sencor can be used alone or in combination with other herbicides including Trifluralin (Treflan) or Alachlor (Lasso) for the control of a wider variety of weeds.

It can generally be successfully used on all but sandy or light sandy loam soils. Although Metribuzin is a comparatively good cocklebur control herbicide, it will not control 100 percent of the cocklebur by any means. Deep-seeded cocklebur seed can be expected to germinate and come up at a later date even in cases where this herbicide is properly used and weather conditions are favorable for good control.

Dinoseb (DNBP or Dinoseb) can be used as an early postemergence ("cracking stage") treatment to control a flush of weeks, including cockleburs, that comes up with the soybean. It should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (seed leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud of the soybean plant. Dinoseb is a contact killer; therefore, it will only control those weeds that are up at the time of application.

Bentazon (Basagran), applied as a topical (over-the-top) treatment, is effective in controlling cocklebur and other annual broadleaf weeds. Cockleburs can be controlled by the use of considerably less chemical if applied when the weeds are small and easy to kill. Thorough coverage of the entire weed is absolutely essential for good control.

Granted, extremely deep-seeded cockleburs may come along after the first month of the life of the soybean crop. If so, and if the three previously-mentioned treatments have been properly used, these can usually be taken care of with postemergence directed treatments of Dinoseb and-or 2,4-DB. By regularly and carefully observing weed infestations in soybean fields and the proper applications of the previously-mentioned treatments, cockleburs can be controlled during the first month after beans come up.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says that cotton prices have continued to rise and that supplies are getting tighter because of improved demand from textile mills

Officials said Tuesday that spot market prices of cotton have jumped nearly 20 cents per pound since late March and are the highest since January 1974.

"Brisk export sales, coupled with supply uncertainties, have provided the impetus for higher prices during recent weeks," the department's Outlook and Situation Board said. "Although this price rise is good news for farmers, mill use of cotton will likely suffer next season as mills switch to the less expensive manmade fibers."

Department experts expect the 1976 cotton crop to be "significantly above" the 8.3 million bales harvested last year. The first USDA cotton production estimate will be announced Aug. 12.

Despite the expected crop increase, total cotton use in the 1976-77 year may range between 10 million and 12 million bales, depending on the price situation.

For the five-month "wind erosion season" which begins Nov. 1 and ends the following May 31, a total of 6,165,335 acres were damaged in 352 counties surveyed in 10 Great Plains states, the department's Soil Conservation Service said Tuesday.

Uterine infections cause costly losses in milk, reproduction

COLUMBIA — Dairymen having costly losses in milk production and cow reproduction problems caused by uterine infections are being told "antibiotics are not the answer!"

"They're no substitute for sound reproductive management," contends H. Allen Garvarick, University of Missouri-Columbia dairy scientist.

Garvarick listed these shortcomings of antibiotics:

-Some microorganisms may become resistant to them.

-Valuable time is lost getting the cow's reproductive tract back in shape to rebreed.

-Antiboitics infused into the uterus may appear in the milk.

Some very effective antibiotics formerly used for uterine infusion have either been removed from the approved list of drugs for dairy cows, or they now require a withdrawal period," says Garvarick.

"One very popular antibiotic now has a 72-hour withdrawal period for milk following infusion into the uterus.

"With improved detection techniques, an antibiotic may be detected in milk if you don't observe these withdrawal periods. Violators could end up losing milk picked up at the farm as well as paying for other producers' milk picked up in the truck."

Garvarick warns dairymen to "devote more time to management that will keep infections of the reproductive tract to a minimum, because there will probably be fewer antibiotics available in the future."

He says incidences of uterine infection are becoming more of a problem among dairy herds because more animals are being kept in a smaller area. These conditions are more favorable for pathological microorganism infection.

"Our recommendation still calls for good sanitation procedures at calving time, cleaning and disinfecting the maternity stalls between each cow, and proper sanitary procedures by personnel assisting the cows."

Farmers can join in small business loan assistance program

JEFFERSON CITY — "Farmers now can participate in the Small Business Administration Loan Program," said C.R. "Dick" Johnston, president of the 60,000 member Missouri Farm Bureau organization.

President Ford has signed the bill making the Small Business Administration Loan Assistance now available to family farmers who are incorporated or belong to a partnership, Johnston said the legislation will allow farmers to obtain operating capital and money for improvements.

He continued by saying that in the past farmers have been barred from participation in the SBA program and if they were in partnership or incorporated, they could not even qualify for loans under the Farmers Home Administration.

"Farmers constitute one of the largest groups of small businessmen in this country," Johnston said, "and it only seems fair they would be allowed the same privileges as other non-farm small business."

"We are most pleased that this Farm Bureau supported legislation passed and that farmers can now take advantage of the Small Business Administration Loan program." Johnston concluded by saying interested farmers should contact their local Small Business Administration representative for more details

Loss of dairymen fails to hurt state's milk production

COLUMBIA — Missouri "lost" 90 per cent of its dairymen and over two-thirds of its cows in the last 15 years. But milk production hasn't suffered one bit.

In fact, Missouri could probably lose one-fourth the cows it has and still maintain production--if the cows were as good as the average of those in the state's Dairy Herd Improvement (DHI) program.

Milk production per cow has more than doubled in the last 20 years and averaged just under 10,000 pounds per cown in 1975, reports Fred Meinershagen, University of Missouri-Columbia extension dairy specialist.

Cows on DHI records averaged 12,300 pounds.

"Dairying has moved a long way since 1953, when an eminent USDA dairy scientist said average production per cow in the U.S., then at 5300 pounds, would need to be raised to 6100 pounds by 1978 if we were to supply the dairy products to feed the expected 25 million increase in population," said Meinershagen.

"That production goal was reached in slightly more than three years. The population of the U.S. rose 25 million in less than ten years and is already 50 million above 1953.

"Ironically, dairy cow numbers which were expected to expand with human populations, have decreased each consecutive year. By 1978, the number of cows may well be half of the 21.7 million head we had in 1953."

Meinershagen listed these factors that have contributed to high milk production per cow:

-High energy rations and high energy feeding coupled with lower cost grain in relation to roughages.

-Greater specialization (and, of course, higher overhead and cash costs to dairymen).

-The cost-price squeeze on dairymen which has forced dairymen to make every effort to improve efficiency--or to go out of business.

-Dairy management and husbandry skills which have benefitted from technology and research, resulting in better equipment, disease prevention, etc.

"Future production per cow will depend on the availability of low-cost high-energy rations," said Meinershagen.

"Despite the increasing liklihood of higher costs for grain, heavy grain feeding will continue for some time. In fact, in the short run, barring crop failure, it may become relatively cheaper than it is now."

Meinershagen predicted that dairy herds will continue to grow in size as dairymen reduce unit cost by spreading overhead over greater cow numbers.

Cockleburs may cut yield in soybeans

By THOMAS A. BROWN JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Controlling cocklebur in soybeans during the first month of the life of the bean crop is the key to minimizing soybean yield losses caused by this weed pest. In addition the cocklebur is much easier to control at this early stage.

According to results of research conducted in Arkansas in which cocklebur infestations up to three cocklebur plants per foot of row were involved, no yield loss was suffered where cocklebur was controlled within four weeks after the beans came up. Yield reductions began about four weeks after beans came up and increased rapidly until beans were 12 weeks old, reaching maximum yield losses at this stage. Cockleburs in soybean fields are not generally controlled during the first four weeks of the life of the bean crop in this area.

In many cases, cockleburs are not controlled until the weeds get larger than the beans after maximum yield loss has been suffered. If controlled before this late stage, it is only after considerable yield reduction has been suffered by the soybean crop. Very often, bean yields are further reduced by herbicide damage to the crop when cocklebur control is attempted during the later stages.

How can cocklebur control be accomplished during the first month of the life of the soybean crop? A combination of control practices will be necessary and methods used should vary with the conditions involved.

Dinoseb (DNBP or Dinoseb) can be used as an early postemergence ("cracking stage") treatment to control a flush of weeks, including cockleburs, that comes up with the soybean. It should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (seed leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud of the soybean plant. New home cost decrease recorded

NEW YORK (AP) — In case you missed the original announcement, it should be recorded that in May the average purchase price of a new single-family home fell to $46,300, a drop of $2,200 from the record-high price a month earlier.

It is understandable that you might believe those figures to be the result of a typographical gremlin, but they are not. It is possible too that they are another of those well-known statistical flukes, but maybe not.

The fact is that there are some solid reasons why the prices of some new homes might have dropped. Some are smaller editions, many are minus the refinements of a year ago. And some sellers have been having problems.

This latter cannot be ignored; if you think you've had troubles in buying a house your local builder can reduce you to tears with his frustrations in trying to sell a house, even at a miniscule profit.

So what do we deduce from this latest news? That it pays to wait? If you so conclude you are battling the odds. You might very well find yourself in the same trap that snared many young householders of the 1960s, who were convinced that housing prices would stabilize.

Well, they did, for a while. But while housing prices were stable, and only briefly, interest rates rose. And they rose and rose, fully 50 per cent in 10 years. And they were still rising, as of May.

Housing prices weren't stable for long either. They too rose and rose, doubling in about 10 years and leaving those who waited holding in their fist a down payment that grew less and less adequate.

Although nobody can say the next 10 years will be a repetition of the past 10, and despite the recent good news, the trend is still upward for both purchase price and financing. What happened in May isn't likely to be repeated.

Price for land, materials and labor are ascending. Many areas are imposing costly building limitations in order to preserve the purity of their water. Operating costs are rising too.

Will there be a technicological break-through that might lower costs? Attempts so far have yet to prove themselves as permanent or broadly acceptable, and many have failed.

Remember the factory house? It's still being produced and the quality is good. But mass production hasn't really caught on; the industry is still largely one of small stick builders operating locally.

The no-frill house? Promising. But some builders maintain they really can't produce a quality house by stripping away distinctive features and then manage to sell at a profit. Still, it continues to offer limited hope.

Mobile homes? Possibilities. But shipments of these units, which had surged to one-half million units several years ago are now back to one-half that, although rising again. Bears watching.

Cooperatives and condominiums? Many buyers have had very successful experiences, but many people still resist them as a substitute for conventional housing. And in some the prices and maintenance costs are high. Cluster housing? In this technique the individual lots are reduced in size in order to provide more common green spaces. Some have been successful, but for the most art they haven't substantially lowered costs.

The fact remains that most Americans like what is called conventional housing, and there is at the moment rather little long-range hope of any meaningful lowering of prices while quality is maintained.

Band sprayer calibration is given in guide

Nine steps for band sprayer calibration are given in a new University of Missouri-Columbia agricultural Guide, No. 1271.

The system includes operating the sprayer over a measured course and for a set length of time. By knowing the area covered and the amount of spray used, the gallons per acre are determined.

New home cost decrease recorded

NEW YORK (AP) — In case you missed the original announcement, it should be recorded that in May the average purchase price of a new single-family home fell to $46,300, a drop of $2,200 from the record-high price a month earlier.

It is understandable that you might believe those figures to be the result of a typographical gremlin, but they are not. It is possible too that they are another of those well-known statistical flukes, but maybe not.

The fact is that there are some solid reasons why the prices of some new homes might have dropped. Some are smaller editions, many are minus the refinements of a year ago. And some sellers have been having problems.

This latter cannot be ignored; if you think you've had troubles in buying a house your local builder can reduce you to tears with his frustrations in trying to sell a house, even at a miniscule profit.

So what do we deduce from this latest news? That it pays to wait? If you so conclude you are battling the odds. You might very well find yourself in the same trap that snared many young householders of the 1960s, who were convinced that housing prices would stabilize.

Well, they did, for a while. But while housing prices were stable, and only briefly, interest rates rose. And they rose and rose, fully 50 per cent in 10 years. And they were still rising, as of May.

Housing prices weren't stable for long either. They too rose and rose, doubling in about 10 years and leaving those who waited holding in their fist a down payment that grew less and less adequate.

Although nobody can say the next 10 years will be a repetition of the past 10, and despite the recent good news, the trend is still upward for both purchase price and financing. What happened in May isn't likely to be repeated.

Price for land, materials and labor are ascending. Many areas are imposing costly building limitations in order to preserve the purity of their water. Operating costs are rising too.

Will there be a technicological break-through that might lower costs? Attempts so far have yet to prove themselves as permanent or broadly acceptable, and many have failed.

Remember the factory house? It's still being produced and the quality is good. But mass production hasn't really caught on; the industry is still largely one of small stick builders operating locally.

The no-frill house? Promising. But some builders maintain they really can't produce a quality house by stripping away distinctive features and then manage to sell at a profit. Still, it continues to offer limited hope.

Mobile homes? Possibilities. But shipments of these units, which had surged to one-half million units several years ago are now back to one-half that, although rising again. Bears watching.

Cooperatives and condominiums? Many buyers have had very successful experiences, but many people still resist them as a substitute for conventional housing. And in some the prices and maintenance costs are high. Cluster housing? In this technique the individual lots are reduced in size in order to provide more common green spaces. Some have been successful, but for the most art they haven't substantially lowered costs.

The fact remains that most Americans like what is called conventional housing, and there is at the moment rather little long-range hope of any meaningful lowering of prices while quality is maintained.

Nine steps for band sprayer calibration are given in a new University of Missouri-Columbia agricultural Guide, No. 1271.

The system includes operating the sprayer over a measured course and for a set length of time. By knowing the area covered and the amount of spray used, the gallons per acre are determined.

Lou Ann Shannon, owner of Models Unlimited, decided to open her studio in Sikeston because she believes "the women here seem to care more about the way they look — they're more aware of an overall look. The town is also very pageant-minded."

And although Mrs. Shannon, a professional model, and her staff are there to give advice, they say their aim is to help each client discover what works best for her.

"Usually Lou Ann has the clients bring in their own make-up kits and they work from there," says Mrs. Williams.

The basic reason for wearing make-up, according to Mrs. Shannon, is to protect the skin from the elements and slow down the onset of wrinkles. Another reason, of course, is to bring out a person's better features and minimize aspects which are not appealing.

Although the results clients are working toward are mainly visible on the outside — their appearance and posture, for example — studio staff members speak of raising an inner consciousness and self-awareness.

Mrs. Williams says that some people have a concept of the studio as catering only to young girls who want to be professional models.

She points out that the youngest client is a 5-year-old and some are in their 50's and 60's. The clients come from as far north as Fredericktown and as far south as Caruthersville.

Although some of the girls who take classes at Models Unlimited have a professional modeling career in mind, others are merely curious about modeling or wish to acquire more poise and self-confidence.

She says she is using the studio as a kind of testing ground to discover whether she is suited to a career as a model.

Liz Bird is only 14 but looks older. She is at Models Unlimited "to improve myself a little." At first she was only curious, but now says she is enthused about her modeling courses.

"It just sounded interesting," she explains. "I always wanted to be a model. I don't really know what I expected," she concludes, "but I'm enjoying it."

In addition to the beginning and advanced modeling courses, Models Unlimited offers an exercise class, a course in self-improvement and a class called pageant preparation, which is exactly what it sounds like — a course to ready girls entering local beauty pageants.

The self-improvement course was designed for women who are suffering an identity crisis. All their lives, they have been identified only as so-and-so's wife or so-and-so's mother.

"It's our job to get them started thinking about themselves as individuals again," says Mrs. Shannon.

Mrs. Shannon, who began modeling in her teens and trained at Lynn Cysell's modeling school and agency in Maryland, is very serious about her profession and still models professionally whenever she can.

"I just love it," she says. "I like to be up on the latest things, so I can tell the girls about them when I get back."

Mrs. Shannon, a petite blonde, lives with her husband Grover and her three children in Caruthersville. She makes use of the time driving to and from the studio in Sikeston to organize her day.

Although she and her staff are anxious to be businesslike, they also try to maintain a pleasant atmosphere for conducting classes.

Light colors give the studio a soft look. There are offices for Mrs. Shannon and Mrs. Williams, and a large classroom with a modeling ramp and several mirrors.

Mrs. Shannon says one of the tasks of the new studio is to find out "what the people in the area want." An escort class for men and installation of some exercise equipment are two projects the staff has in mind for the future.

"The total look is in," says Mrs. Shannon. "And the women in Sikeston definitely want it."

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Men's clothing manufacturers have dished out this summer's fashions in colors to whet the appetite — peach, apricot, lemon, pistachio, mint and, of course, vanilla. While ice cream-flavored suits may look good enough to eat, their appeal melts when worn by a guy who eats too much.

If statistics are correct — some estimates say that half the American population is overweight — then lots of men should lose weight before indulging in nonslimming pastel clothing. But the obvious drawback of dieting into a new wardrobe is the problem of what happens to the old one.

Len Finckle, an advertising executive who sells space for the Yellow Pages in the Chicago area, is well aware of the effects shedding pounds can have on a man's wardrobe. Six years ago he weighed 235 pounds. He joined Weight Watchers and within seven months he was down to 170. Currently Finkle is the only active male lecturer for Weight Watchers in Chicago.

He says that buying clothing is a drudge for most overweight men. "You buy what fits you. When you're size 48, there's not a big selection on the rack."

Once earnest dieting begins and the body starts shrinking, so does the number of garments the man can still wear. "There's only so much a tailor can do," notes Finckle. "With better clothing, you make as many alterations as possible. Pants are particularly troublesome to alter. Finally you have to buy new clothing. But you face the fact that you must wear baggy, sloppy clothes part of the time. You buy less-expensive clothing; sports jackets and slacks replace suits."

And when slimmed and trimmed, you rush right out to buy a flashy new wardrobe, right? Wrong. Admits Finckle, "Like most people who've lost a lot of weight, I still see myself as fat. If someone compliments me on something I'm wearing, I feel self-conscious."

Describing himself as "no clothes' hog," he nonetheless now owns a red blazer and is wearing a subtly attention-getting suit this season he'd never have worn a decade ago — a black-white-blue plaid on a gray background, complete with that fashionable item, the vest. "Buying clothing is more fun for me now, because it's easier. There's more choice."

For men who choose to lose only 10 pounds or so the strain on the wardrobe will not be so severe. Suits are cut to allow for weight fluctuations. Generally, larger sizes can be more extensively altered. Although sizes vary slightly from manufacturer to manufacturer, a spokesperson for Hart Schaffner & Marx, one of the world's largest makers of menswear, states that the following adjustments can and cannot be made, for example, on their jackets, trousers and vests:

SUIT OR SPORTS COATS. The chest can be reduced a maximum of five-eighths inch but cannot be increased. Sides can be taken in or let out up to one inch. The shoulder blade area can be taken in one inch and let out half an inch. Shoulders can be narrowed two-eighths inch but cannot be expanded. The collar can be reduced one inch.

TROUSERS. The waist can be taken in or let out up to two inches. (If greater reduction is necessary, the trousers must be entirely recut.) The waistband can be lowered one inch to eliminate crotch bagginess but obviously cannot be raised. Likewise, legs can be taken in to a desired width but cannot be flared.

VESTS. They can be taken in only an inch because the pocket placement will be affected beyond that measurement. Vests can be let out any amount since a new piece of lining fabric can be sewn into the back. If the let-out is only three-fourth inch, the existing fabric can be utilized.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the parent who was "Boggled By Schools These Days." I agree with her totally.

I am in the 10th grade and can't spell worth a darn. The high school I attend is supposed to be one of the best in the state. I haven't had a course in spelling since Grade Five. Every year our homeroom teacher asks us to list the subjects we would like to see offered. I have put down "spelling" and "grammar" five years in a row. So what do I get? Crazy movies which are supposed to be "educational."

I'm a B student and will be taking my college SATs next year. How am I going to get into a good school when I can't spell a word that has more than six letters?

Teachers complain that they have trouble reading our papers but they have stopped teaching penmanship. It isn't our fault that we can't write. I hope my English teacher reads this letter because I am -- Your Student

Dear Student: It's refreshing to hear from the victim of the system for a change. Usually it's the parents who complain. I've been screaming for years about getting back to the basics. Will someone out there PLEASE LISTEN?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 14-year-old girl who has a big problem. Please don't laugh. It is very serious.

I have an awful lot of hair on my arms and legs. I also have hair on my upper lip that looks terrible. I want to shave my arms and legs but my mother won't let me. I have been secretly putting alcohol on my upper lip to lighten the moustache. Is that O.K.? Please give me some advice fast. I am -- Miserable

Dear M: I do not recommend shaving the hair off arms, especially at age 14. You should bleach it. Also bleach your moustache. (Alcohol is no solution. It will only dry your skin and make it scaly.)

Check with a beautician and learn about the henna and peroxide bleach. (Better to have it done in a shop a time or two -- until you learn how to do it yourself.) As for your hairy legs, if your mother won't let you shave, I suggest a depilatory cream which is available in drugstores. It is harmless and effective.

Dear Ann Landers: A woman in this town grew up with me in Idaho Falls. She was a a terrible liar in her younger days and I'm sorry to say she hasn't changed a bit.

Mabel (not her real name) moved to this city about a year ago. We belong to the same church and the same garden club. I heard her tell one of the ladies she is 46 years of age. Actually she is 54. We were born three months apart -- in the same neighborhood.

I am not a catty person, but I have a strong urge to tell the women the truth. What do you say, Ann Landers? - In The Know

Dear In: Do you honestly believe anyone gives a hootenanny whether Mabel is 46 or 66? Age is only a number -- and most people couldn't care less about someone else's number. Skip it.

Roughing it-the easy way

By JANE SEE WHITE

NEW YORK (AP) — Dian Thomas was sitting cross-legged on the plush carpet of her 19th floor room in an elegant hotel here, frying bacon on the top of a tin can.

"What I really tried to do," she said, flipping the spattering bacon, "was show people the methods of camping without spending a lot of money on equipment."

And the theme of that book is that with a little ingenuity it is possible to do sophisticated cooking on camping trips without spending a great deal of money on equipment.

—A one-gallon can was the stove. One lid had been removed, and a side was raised so that the burning tuna can could be slipped inside. The other lid was the cooking surface.

According to Miss Thomas, and "Roughing It Easy," the variations are nearly infinite.

She offers advice on how to bake, broil, roast, fry and boil food outdoors, and recipes for such exotic outdoor meals as strawberry upsidedown cake, sourdough bread and bacon and eggs cooked together in a brown paper bag.

The daughter of a forest ranger, Miss Thomas grew up in Utah, spending much of her time outdoors. After graduation from Brigham Young University in Salt Lake City, she accepted a home economics teaching position there.

"I thought, 'Now where should I begin?' and I decided I should teach first what I knew best, so I started with an outdoor cooking unit and the students loved it," she said.

When she left the teaching job briefly to take a master's degree in home economics, university officials asked her to write a manual so that other teachers could offer outdoor cooking while Miss Thomas was gone. From the manual came the book, which was published by the Brigham Young University Press.

She placed a cup filled with water on the burning waxed cardboard in the tuna can and — amazingly — the water boiled and the cup did not burn.

The book includes advice on digging latrines, selecting campsites, varieties of fires and their uses, packing, planning, first aid and other camping basics.

About 80 per cent of the book is based on common camping practices, Miss Thomas says, and the other 20 per cent is the product of her own imagination — like frying bacon wrapped around a stick.

"I've found that if you make do with what you have, you'll have a lot more fun," she said.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

Margaret Corbin followed her husband to Fort Washington and was at his side in battle on November 16, 1776, when he fell, mortally wounded, beside his cannon. Margaret took his place until she too was hit, her breast and shoulder torn by grapeshot. She never regained the use of her arm. Recognizing her courage under fire, Congress made Margaret the first woman pensioner of the United States. Margaret Corbin is the only woman from the Revolution buried in West Point cemetery, The World Almanac notes.

For men who choose to lose only 10 pounds or so the strain on the wardrobe will not be so severe. Suits are cut to allow for weight fluctuations. Generally, larger sizes can be more extensively altered. Although sizes vary slightly from manufacturer to manufacturer, a spokesperson for Hart Schaffner & Marx, one of the world's largest makers of menswear, states that the following adjustments can and cannot be made, for example, on their jackets, trousers and vests:

SUIT OR SPORTS COATS. The chest can be reduced a maximum of five-eighths inch but cannot be increased. Sides can be taken in or let out up to one inch. The shoulder blade area can be taken in one inch and let out half an inch. Shoulders can be narrowed two-eighths inch but cannot be expanded. The collar can be reduced one inch.

TROUSERS. The waist can be taken in or let out up to two inches. (If greater reduction is necessary, the trousers must be entirely recut.) The waistband can be lowered one inch to eliminate crotch bagginess but obviously cannot be raised. Likewise, legs can be taken in to a desired width but cannot be flared.

VESTS. They can be taken in only an inch because the pocket placement will be affected beyond that measurement. Vests can be let out any amount since a new piece of lining fabric can be sewn into the back. If the let-out is only three-fourth inch, the existing fabric can be utilized.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the parent who was "Boggled By Schools These Days." I agree with her totally.

I am in the 10th grade and can't spell worth a darn. The high school I attend is supposed to be one of the best in the state. I haven't had a course in spelling since Grade Five. Every year our homeroom teacher asks us to list the subjects we would like to see offered. I have put down "spelling" and "grammar" five years in a row. So what do I get? Crazy movies which are supposed to be "educational."

I'm a B student and will be taking my college SATs next year. How am I going to get into a good school when I can't spell a word that has more than six letters?

Teachers complain that they have trouble reading our papers but they have stopped teaching penmanship. It isn't our fault that we can't write. I hope my English teacher reads this letter because I am -- Your Student

Dear Student: It's refreshing to hear from the victim of the system for a change. Usually it's the parents who complain. I've been screaming for years about getting back to the basics. Will someone out there PLEASE LISTEN?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 14-year-old girl who has a big problem. Please don't laugh. It is very serious.

I have an awful lot of hair on my arms and legs. I also have hair on my upper lip that looks terrible. I want to shave my arms and legs but my mother won't let me. I have been secretly putting alcohol on my upper lip to lighten the moustache. Is that O.K.? Please give me some advice fast. I am -- Miserable

Dear M: I do not recommend shaving the hair off arms, especially at age 14. You should bleach it. Also bleach your moustache. (Alcohol is no solution. It will only dry your skin and make it scaly.)

Check with a beautician and learn about the henna and peroxide bleach. (Better to have it done in a shop a time or two -- until you learn how to do it yourself.) As for your hairy legs, if your mother won't let you shave, I suggest a depilatory cream which is available in drugstores. It is harmless and effective.

Dear Ann Landers: A woman in this town grew up with me in Idaho Falls. She was a a terrible liar in her younger days and I'm sorry to say she hasn't changed a bit.

Mabel (not her real name) moved to this city about a year ago. We belong to the same church and the same garden club. I heard her tell one of the ladies she is 46 years of age. Actually she is 54. We were born three months apart -- in the same neighborhood.

I am not a catty person, but I have a strong urge to tell the women the truth. What do you say, Ann Landers? -- In The Know

Dear In: Do you honestly believe anyone gives a hootenanny whether Mabel is 46 or 66? Age is only a number -- and most people couldn't care less about someone else's number. Skip it.

Roughing it-the easy way

By JANE SEE WHITE

NEW YORK (AP) — Dian Thomas was sitting cross-legged on the plush carpet of her 19th floor room in an elegant hotel here, frying bacon on the top of a tin can.

"What I really tried to do," she said, flipping the spattering bacon, "was show people the methods of camping without spending a lot of money on equipment."

And the theme of that book is that with a little ingenuity it is possible to do sophisticated cooking on camping trips without spending a great deal of money on equipment.

The ingenious camper doesn't even need to buy a frying pan. Witness the hotel room bacon:

—A tuna fish can, filled with coiled cardboard and covered with melted wax was the source of heat. Put a match to it and it burns just like canned heat.

—A one-gallon can was the stove. One lid had been removed, and a side was raised so that the burning tuna can could be slipped inside. The other lid was the cooking surface.

According to Miss Thomas, and "Roughing It Easy," the variations are nearly infinite.

She offers advice on how to bake, broil, roast, fry and boil food outdoors, and recipes for such exotic outdoor meals as strawberry upsidedown cake, sourdough bread and bacon and eggs cooked together in a brown paper bag.

The daughter of a forest ranger, Miss Thomas grew up in Utah, spending much of her time outdoors. After graduation from Brigham Young University in Salt Lake City, she accepted a home economics teaching position there.

"I thought, 'Now where should I begin?' and I decided I should teach first what I knew best, so I started with an outdoor cooking unit and the students loved it," she said.

When she left the teaching job briefly to take a master's degree in home economics, university officials asked her to write a manual so that other teachers could offer outdoor cooking while Miss Thomas was gone. From the manual came the book, which was published by the Brigham Young University Press.

Miss Thomas was in New York promoting a new paper-back edition — and boiling water in a paper cup in her hotel room.

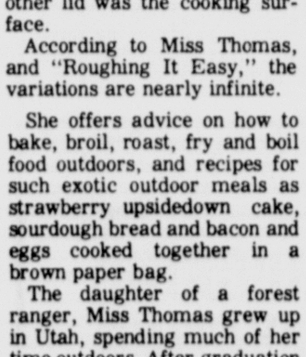
She placed a cup filled with water on the burning waxed cardboard in the tuna can and — amazingly — the water boiled and the cup did not burn.

The book includes advice on digging latrines, selecting campsites, varieties of fires and their uses, packing, planning, first aid and other camping basics.

About 80 per cent of the book is based on common camping practices, Miss Thomas says, and the other 20 per cent is the product of her own imagination — like frying bacon wrapped around a stick.

"I've found that if you make do with what you have, you'll have a lot more fun," she said.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS



Margaret Corbin followed her husband to Fort Washington and was at his side in battle on November 16, 1776, when he fell, mortally wounded, beside his cannon. Margaret took his place until she too was hit, her breast and shoulder torn by grapeshot. She never regained the use of her arm. Recognizing her courage under fire, Congress made Margaret the first woman pensioner of the United States. Margaret Corbin is the only woman from the Revolution buried in West Point cemetery, The World Almanac notes.

Drum Hideaway

Place prizes or souvenirs for your Bicentennial party inside this large drum!

Use a three-gallon cardboard ice cream carton with its lid for the drum; decorate it with crepe paper, colored paper and gold cord or yarn.

Remove the lid, and cut down the carton to about 6½" high. Remove (and save) the center of the lid; replace the rim around the top of the carton.

Uncle Sam Treat Holder

Round up two short cans about 3" across (such as tuna or pineapple cans) for the head and body, a can slightly narrower and about 3" high for the hat, light weight cardboard, and enamel or acrylic paint.

Remove the labels on all the cans. Glue the head and body together, so the top is open. Paint the head and body, adding details as pictured.

Glue a 4½" cardboard circle to the open end of the hat can for a brim; paint the hat. Place nuts, pretzels or other treats inside the head. Set the hat on the head.

Girl wins essay contest

Sherry Gail Ing of Sikeston, one of 14 winners of the essary contest on 'How to Prevent Juvenile Delinquency', receives her Certificate of Merit from Governor Bond.

JEFFERSON CITY — Sherry Gail Ing, Division of Youth Services, group home No. 4, Sikeston, is one of 14 winners of an essay contest on "How to Prevent Juvenile Delinquency," sponsored by the State Division of Youth Services.

The contest was open to all Missouri high school students and one winner from each of 14 designated regions was selected including one student in a Youth Services Group Home.

The winners were provided with an expense-paid trip to Jefferson City to receive their Certificate of Appreciation from Governor Bond and to attend a luncheon with Max Brand, Director of Youth Services and members of the division.

The essay contest was made possible by a recent grant from the Missouri Council on Criminal Justice to the Division of Youth Services.

The grant invited the citizens of Missouri to assist in planning for delinquency prevention, through the formation of regional citizen committees.

Some suggestions mentioned in the essays were to create more activities for youth, more opportunities for youth to be involved in things and use of leisure time. The recommendations from citizens and youth will assist the state of Missouri in fulfilling its responsibilities in delinquency prevention and in providing needed services to all children of Missouri.

Decorating Tips

SPILLS AND ILLS

Everyone knows about the surface beauty of furniture made of handsome hardwoods like oak, maple, cherry, walnut, pecan and others. Whatever the style, hardwood furniture has a warmth and grace that it gets from the innate beauty of the wood itself. But one beauty of hardwood furniture that many people often forget is the fact that you can keep it looking beautiful with very little effort, even when mishaps try to mar it. Here are some tips on how to deal with spills on your hardwood furniture.

INK. If your finish is protected by a good paste wax, the ink will not be absorbed into the wood and you can blot it up with a blotter or cloth and have no trace of the spill. If you discover the spill only after it has had a chance to dry, use a non-oily liquid furniture polish to remove it. Or you can use a dampened cloth to pat (not wipe) the mark away. Keep moving to a clean spot on the cloth, because what you are actually doing is diluting the ink until it is gone. Don't forget, water and hardwood are natural enemies only when the water is left standing on the furniture, so you can wash hardwood much more readily than you might think. Just be sure you dry it.

NAIL POLISH, too, will fail to penetrate a good waxing job and can also be blotted away immediately without fear of leaving a mark. For dried nail polish, dip steel wool into your liquid furniture polish and rub gently (along the grain of the wood) until the nail polish is gone.

PAINT, if fresh, can also be removed with steel wool dipped in liquid furniture cleansing polish. For old paint stains, use linseed oil. Allow the linseed oil to stand on the spot until you can see that the paint is softening. Then wipe it with a cloth saturated in the oil.

ALCOHOL, whether in the form of perfume, liquor, medications or straight (as in rubbing alcohol), has a much deserved bad reputation for causing damage on lacquer finishes. Even when it is blotted immediately, it may still leave a mark. If so, one unorthodox method that works is to rub moistened cigar ash into the spot. Or you can rub the spot with a cloth dampened with a few drops of ammonia.

Follow the removal of spills with a re-polishing or re-waxing of the surface you have been working on. Your wipe-up method may have upset the wax on the surface, and you will have an unsightly "ring" or spot where you have been working. Don't worry, it will disappear when you re-polish or re-wax.

Even if you are not the world's greatest repairman, the very nature of hardwood will help you through these difficult times: the varied grain patterns that Mother Nature created to be a distinguishing mark of genuine hardwood make home repairs easy to do and difficult to detect.

Dear Consumer

Will This Flu Be Bad Too?

By Virginia Knauer
Special Assistant to the President and Director
Office of Consumer Affairs
Department of Health, Education and Welfare

This year the United States is embarking on an enormous effort in preventive medicine—immunizing the nation against a deadly form of influenza—swine flu.

Why swine flu?
Why this year?
Why everyone?

The virus that causes "the flu" is constantly changing. From year to year, the changes tend to be comparatively minor. But periodically, about every ten years or so, there occurs what scientists call a major "antigenic" shift. When this happens, the flu virus has changed so much that almost no one has immunity to it. Last year's type of flu vaccine can no longer guarantee protection.

You probably remember the big epidemic in 1968 with what was called Hong Kong flu. The bad flu year before that was Asian flu 1957. My mother told me of the horrible time in 1918 when half-a-million people in the U. S. died from what was then called Spanish flu. My home town of Philadelphia was the worst hit city.

This year, we were alerted to another potentially dangerous flu outbreak. In February, flu infected hundreds of military recruits at Fort Dix, N.J. The virus causing this outbreak was found and identified as similar to the strain that causes influenza in swine. This strain is also similar in some respects to the virus suspected to be the cause of the great 1918 epidemic.

Faced with the possibility of another flu epidemic, the nation's scientific and medical authorities developed plans for an all-out vaccination program to protect people during the coming flu season, which generally runs from November through March.

"Shots" will be given free at health department clinics and community health centers. There will be no charge whatsoever to anyone for vaccine, and everyone will have an opportunity to receive free shots. People who wish to get their shots in their own doctor's office may be charged for the time, but not for the vaccine.

Because swine flu is highly contagious, I urge consumers to participate in this vital program. Rolling up your sleeve for this new flu shot is insurance against something that might happen. Don't gamble by being unprotected.

For more information on this new virus and how to protect yourself, you may want to write for a free copy of New Flu (No. 345 D), Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, CO. 81009.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Tell Ruth who has trouble getting out all the contents in aerosol cans that the small spray nozzle on most such cans will pull right off? If my paint cans quit spraying, I take off this little top, let it soak in paint thinner or turpentine and then clean out the loosened paint with a toothpick or pin.

Also, I have discovered that the tops of many such cans are interchangeable so when I finish with one that is in good order I save it and then have a spare in case of a clogged can. —JERRI.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns wallpaper since we have just papered our kitchen. Each roll was covered with a thin plastic wrap. On opening the rolls we found a large sticker sealing them. When peeled off it took some of the pattern, so we had to cut 12 inches off each roll. When the pattern has to be matched, even more can be lost. But that sticker could have been on the outside of the wrap. One roll had also not been pre-pasted and after cutting and trying to get it on the wall it fell right off. Too much merchandise seems to just be thrown at customers. —NAOMI.

DEAR POLLY — I want to tell Ruth that I store aerosol cans upside down when not in use. I have little waste from not being able to use all the contents. I thank a household products salesman who gave me the suggestion. —EDNA.

DEAR POLLY — Tell Ruth who has trouble getting out all the contents in aerosol cans that the small spray nozzle on most such cans will pull right off? If my paint cans quit spraying, I take off this little top, let it soak in paint thinner or turpentine and then clean out the loosened paint with a toothpick or pin.

Also, I have discovered that the tops of many such cans are interchangeable so when I finish with one that is in good order I save it and then have a spare in case of a clogged can. —JERRI.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns wallpaper since we have just papered our kitchen. Each roll was covered with a thin plastic wrap. On opening the rolls we found a large sticker sealing them. When peeled off it took some of the pattern, so we had to cut 12 inches off each roll. When the pattern has to be matched, even more can be lost. But that sticker could have been on the outside of the wrap. One roll had also not been pre-pasted and after cutting and trying to get it on the wall it fell right off. Too much merchandise seems to just be thrown at customers. —NAOMI.

DEAR POLLY — I want to tell Ruth that I store aerosol cans upside down when not in use. I have little waste from not being able to use all the contents. I thank a household products salesman who gave me the suggestion. —EDNA.

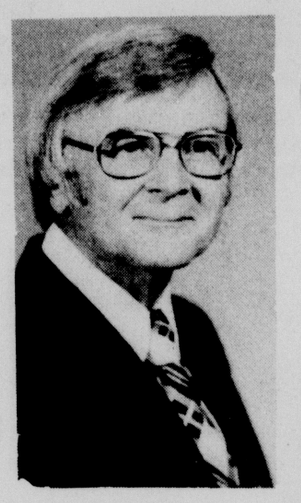
The middle age stage in marriage

By
ARTHUR C. FULBRIGHT



Dr. Arthur Fulbright

The middle age stage in marriage has its distinctive qualities - some creating anxiety and crisis, others bringing liberation and fulfillment. Let's take a look at some of them.

We'll begin with the negative side. The middle-aged wife faces three crises. The first is menopause; and in my counseling experience this is not as disturbing as the others, though it is often used as a scapegoat for both of them. We all know by now that women don't lose their capacity for sexual response with their last menstrual period; what many are glad to lose is their anxiety about a possible late and unwanted pregnancy.

The second crisis is the "empty nest," which confronts many devoted mothers with a shattering sense of being no longer needed. The third crisis is the awareness that the bloom of youth is fading, and that no cosmetic aids can conceal the fact of diminishing attractiveness. Wives are cautious about acknowledging, even to themselves, the waves of panic that these events bring.

For husbands, this is a time when ambitions are either fulfilled, leading to preoccupation with increasing responsibilities on the job; or unfulfilled, bringing a sense of failure and sinking self-esteem. Either way, a man may grow impatient with his wife's fretting, and her increasing demands for affection and attention; and he may take the easy way of escape, celebrating his triumphs or drowning his sorrows by forming a liaison with a younger and more attractive woman. This is made easier for him if his wife has spent the earlier years so deeply involved in the lives of their children that they have failed to develop an enduring companionship with each other.

Let us, however, look at the other side of the picture. Several studies have shown that the departure of the children brings to he middle-aged couple an opportunity to renew their companionship with each other. They have now reached the stage in life when unrealistic romantic notions have been shed, and when emotional security, and the assurance of continued mutual affection and support in the years that lie ahead, are vitally important goals. Unless they are deeply disillusioned or alienated, they are usually willing to work for these goals if they can be given confidence that they are really attainable.

What's the law?

The case of the harassing creditor

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Ken turned to installment buying in order to keep up appearances. Unfortunately, while he had no difficulty buying on time, he ran into a lot of trouble paying on time. In fact, he ultimately found himself unable to pay a all.

R efusing to take "I'm sorry" for an answer, Mr. Wimple -- one of Ken's more persistent creditors -- began to telephone Ken at all hours of the night and to dog his footsteps like a bloodhound. When he lost the scent on several occasions, he returned to Ken's home and complained to several of Ken's neighbors that Ken was a "deadbeat" who didn't pay his bills.

While Mr. Wimple figured that his complaining might put some pressure on Ken to pay up, his tactics boomeranged when Ken sued him for damages.

"I may owe him some money," Ken protested to a judge, "but it doesn't give him the right to go around insulting me."

"He's got some nerve," was Mr. Wimple's answer. "Instead of him suing me, I should be suing him. He owes me a small fortune in unpaid bills and he won't pay me. Certainly, as a creditor, I've got a right to try and collect my money. And, if I want to talk to people, who's he to say I can't?"

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the talkative Mr. Wimple pay Ken damages for insulting him?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that while a creditor may indulge in reasonable efforts to collect a debt, he may not set upon a calculated plan of harassment and embarrassment to enforce collection of the debt by defamatory and insulting remarks to the debtor's neighbors. A creditor, noted the judge, may not unreasonably coerce the debtor or seriously abridge his rights of privacy.

(Based upon a 1968 Louisiana Court of Appeals Decision)

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

Except for Virginia, Massachusetts was best known as the colony where loudest voices against British policies were raised. Open agitation, acts of resistance and the manipulation of public opinion against British officials were everyday occurrences in Massachusetts after troops were stationed there in 1768. Although the first blood was shed there, the tide of war soon shifted to neighboring colonies. Yet Massachusetts had the largest number of troops in the war, The World Almanac notes: 20,000 militia, 67,907 Continental Army.

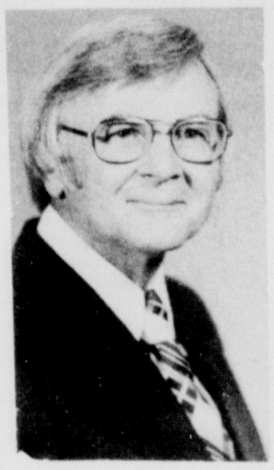
The middle age stage in marriage

By
ARTHUR C. FULBRIGHT



Dr. Arthur Fulbright

The middle age stage in marriage has its distinctive qualities - some creating anxiety and crisis, others bringing liberation and fulfillment. Let's take a look at some of them.

We'll begin with the negative side. The middle-aged wife faces three crises. The first is menopause; and in my counseling experience this is not as disturbing as the others, though it is often used as a scapegoat for both of them. We all know by now that women don't lose their capacity for sexual response with their last menstrual period; what many are glad to lose is their anxiety about a possible late and unwanted pregnancy.

The second crisis is the "empty nest," which confronts many devoted mothers with a shattering sense of being no longer needed. The third crisis is the awareness that the bloom of youth is fading, and that no cosmetic aids can conceal the fact of diminishing attractiveness. Wives are cautious about acknowledging, even to themselves, the waves of panic that these events bring.

For husbands, this is a time when ambitions are either fulfilled, leading to preoccupation with increasing responsibilities on the job; or unfulfilled, bringing a sense of failure and sinking self-esteem. Either way, a man may grow impatient with his wife's fretting, and her increasing demands for affection and attention; and he may take the easy way of escape, celebrating his triumphs or drowning his sorrows by forming a liaison with a younger and more attractive woman. This is made easier for him if his wife has spent the earlier years so deeply involved in the lives of their children that they have failed to develop an enduring companionship with each other.

Let us, however, look at the other side of the picture. Several studies have shown that the departure of the children brings to he middle-aged couple an opportunity to renew their companionship with each other. They have now reached the stage in life when unrealistic romantic notions have been shed, and when emotional security, and the assurance of continued mutual affection and support in the years that lie ahead, are vitally important goals. Unless they are deeply disillusioned or alienated, they are usually willing to work for these goals if they can be given confidence that they are really attainable.

What's the law?

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Ken turned to installment buying in order to keep up appearances. Unfortunately, while he had no difficulty buying on time, he ran into a lot of trouble paying on time. In fact, he ultimately found himself unable to pay a all.

R efusing to take "I'm sorry" for an answer, Mr. Wimple -- one of Ken's more persistent creditors -- began to telephone Ken at all hours of the night and to dog his footsteps like a bloodhound. When he lost the scent on several occasions, he returned to Ken's home and complained to several of Ken's neighbors that Ken was a "deadbeat" who didn't pay his bills.

While Mr. Wimple figured that his complaining might put some pressure on Ken to pay up, his tactics boomeranged when Ken sued him for damages.

"I may owe him some money," Ken protested to a judge, "but it doesn't give him the right to go around insulting me."

"He's got some nerve,"-was Mr. Wimple's answer. "Instead of him suing me, I should be suing him. He owes me a small fortune in unpaid bills and he won't pay me. Certainly, as a creditor, I've got a right to try and collect my money. And, if I want to talk to people, who's he to say I can't?"

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the talkative Mr. Wimple pay Ken damages for insulting him?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that while a creditor may indulge in reasonable efforts to collect a debt, he may not set upon a calculated plan of harassment and embarrassment to enforce collection of the debt by defamatory and insulting remarks to the debtor's neighbors. A creditor, noted the judge, may not unreasonably coerce the debtor or seriously abridge his rights of privacy.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

Except for Virginia, Massachusetts was best known as the colony where loudest voices against British policies were raised. Open agitation, acts of resistance and the manipulation of public opinion against British officials were everyday occurrences in Massachusetts after troops were stationed there in 1768. Although the first blood was shed there, the tide of war soon shifted to neighboring colonies. Yet Massachusetts had the largest number of troops in the war, The World Almanac notes: 20,000 militia, 67,907 Continental Army.

'Dirty Mary Crazy Larry' comes to town

The film, starring Peter Fonda, Susan George, Adam Roarke and Vic Morrow, is fraught with action wherein some 18 vehicles crash during a series of top-speed chases.

But in the words of director Hough, "Action is secondary to bringing out the best acting in actors."

Hough, director of top action films — he directed "The Avengers" TV series as well as "The Legend of Hell House," a thriller, has no qualms about filling a screen with slam-bang excitement. It is just that he would also like to fill it with unforgettable performances from actors such as Orson Welles who he directed last year in "Treasure Island."

"Once one captures the action on film, then it's up to you in the editing room," Hough says. "You have to snip here and there, and splice together the action with the reactions, the point-of-view shots with the panoramic action. If one does this correctly, then the total chase becomes a believable commodity.

"That's why as a director, I feel I accomplish more if I can get an actor to motivate properly, to get him to carry off his scene with a special quality that will make the audience sit up and take note."

Hough, who apprenticed in the film business at EMI-MGM Studios, Elstree, London, for some ten years, was recommended by then studio chief Bryan Forbes to Producer Irving Allen for the feature "Sudden Terror." Hough had impressed Forbes with his direction of several segments of "The Avengers."

Producer Norman Herman selected him to direct "Dirty Mary Crazy Larry" after Hough had worked on "The Legend of Hell House," also an Academy Pictures production for 20th Century-Fox produced by Herman.

Scripted by Leigh Chapman and Antonio Santean from a Richard Unekis novel, "Dirty Mary Crazy Larry," a story of a $150,000 extortion heist and a high-speed top action chase, has Mickey Zide as associate producer.

Fugitives

Peter Fonda, left and Susan George star as fugitives in a wild car chase scene in "Dirty Mary and Crazy Larry" along with Adam Roarke and Vic Morrow. "Dirty Mary and Crazy Larry" was written by Leigh Chapman and Antonio Santean.

Biker wheeled his way into stardom

"I enjoyed those 'biker' pictures," Adam grins. "At first it was a lot of fun—after all, I loved riding a motorcycle. But toward the end it became a drag.

"It seemed like all we did was to roar up the motors, spitting dust and dirt all over the landscape and digging out like Superman on takeoff.

"I'm thankful though, because it was through the 'biker' films that I got my chance to do bigger things."

Producer-director Frank Perry saw him in one of the motorcycle gang films and cast him appropriately in "Play Is As It Lays," in the role of a director of motorbike motion pictures.

"That role made other producers aware that I could do something besides a greasy-bearded motor-biker. Since then I've been working pretty steadily in a variety of roles, all of them challenging and that's what I love."

Roarke was born in Brooklyn, the Bay Ridge area, attending school there. He went to work on the New York docks as a longshoreman, but then decided to try Hollywood.

He had to work at other jobs, among them parking cars at Chasen's, while looking for employment in Hollywood. Then he went into the Marine Corps. After service he studied with Brian Hutton and this resulted in a small role in "13 West Street" with Alan Ladd.

Producer-director Joshua Logan saw him in the part and cast him in "Ensign Pulver" for Warner Bros. This was followed with a co-starring role in "Fluffy" with Tony Randall and Shirley Jones.

Then he signed with Universal Studios and during a two-year contract starred in more than 20 TV shows, among them "The Virginian," "Suspense," "Arrest and Trial" and others.

It was at this time that Roarke started his "biker" film career.

"I played the role of Sonny Barger, the president of the Hell's Angels, in 'Hell's Angels on Wheels.'"

Roarke also starred in "The Savage Seven" and some dozen other motor-bike pictures. Thus far, he has appeared or starred in more than 17 films.

Imported Peanut

The peanut, native to the Americas, was imported into Africa by Portuguese traders and returned again in the 18th and 19th centuries on ships transporting slaves. Primarily intended as food for the slaves during the long ocean crossing, the peanuts that were left over from these voyages were planted around the slave cabins. This was the beginning of one of the most important crops in the United States.

Look what's new at the movies...

'Dirty Mary Crazy Larry' comes to town

Hough gets drawn into action, acting

The film, starring Peter Fonda, Susan George, Adam Roarke and Vic Morrow, is fraught with action wherein some 18 vehicles crash during a series of top-speed chases.

But in the words of director Hough, "Action is secondary to bringing out the best acting in actors."

Hough, director of top action films — he directed "The Avengers" TV series as well as "The Legend of Hell House," a thriller, has no qualms about filling a screen with slam-bang excitement. It is just that he would also like to fill it with unforgettable performances from actors such as Orson Welles who he directed last year in "Treasure Island."

Actually, Hough says that directing action sequences are possibly the easiest scenes to guide along.

"Once one captures the action on film, then it's up to you in the editing room," Hough says. "You have to snip here and there, and splice together the action with the reactions, the point-of-view shots with the panoramic action. If one does this correctly, then the total chase becomes a believable commodity.

"That's why as a director, I feel I accomplish more if I can get an actor to motivate properly, to get him to carry off his scene with a special quality that will make the audience sit up and take note."

Hough, who apprenticed in the film business at EMI-MGM Studios, Elstree, London, for some ten years, was recommended by then studio chief Bryan Forbes to Producer Irving Allen for the feature "Sudden Terror." Hough had impressed Forbes with his direction of several segments of "The Avengers."

Producer Norman Herman selected him to direct "Dirty Mary Crazy Larry" after Hough had worked on "The Legend of Hell House," also an Academy Pictures production for 20th Century-Fox produced by Herman.

Scripted by Leigh Chapman and Antonio Santean from a Richard Unekis novel, "Dirty Mary Crazy Larry," a story of a $150,000 extortion heist and a high-speed top action chase, has Mickey Zide as associate producer.

Fugitives

Peter Fonda, left and Susan George star as fugitives in a wild car chase scene in "Dirty Mary and Crazy Larry" along with Adam Roarke and Vic Morrow. "Dirty Mary and Crazy Larry" was written by Leigh Chapman and Antonio Santean.

Biker wheeled his way into stardom

To Adam Roarke the "motor bike gang" films of the '60's were a real blessing under a cloud of dust.

"I enjoyed those 'biker' pictures," Adam grins. "At first it was a lot of fun—after all, I loved riding a motorcycle. But toward the end it became a drag.

"It seemed like all we did was to roar up the motors, spitting dust and dirt all over the landscape and digging out like Superman on takeoff.

"I'm thankful though, because it was through the 'biker' films that I got my chance to do bigger things."

Producer-director Frank Perry saw him in one of the motorcycle gang films and cast him appropriately in "Play Is As It Lays," in the role of a director of motorbike motion pictures.

"That role made other producers aware that I could do something besides a greasy-bearded motor-biker. Since then I've been working pretty steadily in a variety of roles, all of them challenging and that's what I love."

Roarke was born in Brooklyn, the Bay Ridge area, attending school there. He went to work on the New York docks as a longshoreman, but then decided to try Hollywood.

He had to work at other jobs, among them parking cars at Chasen's, while looking for employment in Hollywood. Then he went into the Marine Corps. After service he studied with Brian Hutton and this resulted in a small role in "13 West Street" with Alan Ladd.

Producer-director Joshua Logan saw him in the part and cast him in "Ensign Pulver" for Warner Bros. This was followed with a co-starring role in "Fluffy" with Tony Randall and Shirley Jones.

Then he signed with Universal Studios and during a two-year contract starred in more than 20 TV shows, among them "The Virginian," "Suspense," "Arrest and Trial" and others.

It was at this time that Roarke started his "biker" film career.

"I played the role of Sonny Barger, the president of the Hell's Angels, in 'Hell's Angels on Wheels.'"

Roarke also starred in "The Savage Seven" and some dozen other motor-bike pictures. Thus far, he has appeared or starred in more than 17 films.

Imported Peanut

The peanut, native to the Americas, was imported into Africa by Portuguese traders and returned again in the 18th and 19th centuries on ships transporting slaves. Primarily intended as food for the slaves during the long ocean crossing, the peanuts that were left over from these voyages were planted around the slave cabins. This was the beginning of one of the most important crops in the United States.

Afraid You're Going Deaf?

Cape Girardeau, Mo.— A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this non-operating model, put in on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this non-working model will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Beltone Hearing Aid Center

Afraid You're Going Deaf?

Cape Girardeau, Mo. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this non-operating model, put in on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this non-working model will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Beltone Hearing Aid Center

Phineas T. Barnum was an American showman whose imagination, shrewdness, wit and keen sense of publicity helped popularize the circus as an amusement in America, The World Almanac recalls. In 1880, Barnum joined forces with managerial genius James A. Bailey, creating "The Greatest Show on Earth." The P.T. Barnum Museum is located in Bridgeport, Conn., where he was elected mayor for one year in 1875.

Prince Valiant

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT ARRIVES AT THE ISLAND OF SAMOS AND CLIMBS THE HILL TO THE DIONSEUS VILLA. IT WAS REPORTED THAT HE HAD ABUSED HIS WIFE HELENE, ALETA'S SISTER, AND VAL HAS COME TO FIND OUT. THE VILLA IS SILENT, DESERTED.

THE ROOMS ARE STRIPPED CLEAN, ONLY ONE RUG REMAINS. VAL LIFTS IT. "SO, DIONSEUS, YOU SEEM TO HAVE ANNOYED SOMEONE WITH A QUICK TEMPER."

FROM THE PEOPLE IN THE MARKETPLACE, HE GETS THE STORY: HOW AJAXOS HAD COME AND TAKEN EVERYTHING FROM THE VILLA INCLUDING HELENE.

HIS TRAIL LEADS THEM TO PIRAEUS, THE PORT OF ATHENS. THEY SEARCH THE HARBOR BUT THERE IS NO SIGN OF AJAXOS OR HIS SHIP.

© King Features Syndicate, Inc., 1976. World rights reserved.

WHILE WANDERING ABOUT ATHENS, VAL COMES ACROSS A RECRUITER OFFERING HIGH WAGES, PLUNDER, WOMEN AND SLAVES TO ANYONE WHO WILL JOIN THE UNCONQUERABLE ARMY OF KING HAJAS. ONE OF THE RECRUITS WEARS A WRISTLET THAT VAL RECOGNIZES AS ONE DIONSEUS WORE WHEN LAST THEY MET.

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I had my daughter's picture taken and the "package" included two picture charms. I was told the general use was one for Mother's charm bracelet and the other for Daddy's key chain.

Well, the charm didn't fit Daddy's key chain and I didn't have a charm bracelet, but several months later I had my ears pierced and went earring-crazy.

So many people have commented on them, I thought I'd pass the idea on for mothers who have the charms or would like to include them the next time baby's picture is taken.

It's so simple to put the wire through the little hole on the charm. Be sure to squeeze the section together on the wires that hold the charm as an extra safety measure to avoid losing them.

Christene Meadows

Heloise

A NEW LEAF!

DEAR HELOISE:

To make a different-looking cake, I laid a clean maple leaf on top of a frosted cake. I used a toothpick to trace the outline of the leaf, then carefully removed the leaf.

I went over the leaf outline in green frosting. Use yellow, orange or red frosting for fall colors. I filled in a few leaf veins too.

Gain Upton

IT'S PUPPY LOVE!

DEAR HELOISE:

To make a coat sweater for a small dog, cut the arm off a sweater you no longer use.

See how long you need it to reach to the rear part of your pet. Measure up two inches from the ribbed end and cut two little holes about two and one-half inches apart.

Put the dog's head through the ribbed part and the legs through the two holes and you have a nice warm coat.

You and your dog will be happy.

A Friend

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

SO LONG, SO LOW!

DEAR HELOISE:

I sew a lot and use my kitchen table (extended) for a cutting table. However, my legs almost forgot to stop growing, so I ended up quite tall. You can imagine what a short table did to my back when I was cutting out a garment.

But I finally got smarter and outwitted that short table. I just made its legs longer, too! I put a can (in my case, it is a gallon-sized empty instant-potato can) under each leg and, hallelujah, no more aching back. If you are having the same problem, try this. The can may be full or empty, any size, depending on your height.

I covered the empty cans I use with adhesive-backed paper. Makes them look a little better. But as long as it helps my back I don't care that the whole thing looks a little s-t-r-a-n-g-e...

A STICKY PROBLEM

DEAR HELOISE:

When diapering baby with disposable diapers, try putting an adhesive bandage over the tapes to reinsure its staying power.

You guessed it — I've had experience with my baby whose diaper came off!

A Mother

WHO TOLD YOU SO?

DEAR HELOISE:

I bought a beautiful bunch of long-stemmed pussywillows for my room only to find out we didn't have a vase tall enough to put them in.

So I took two large 46-ounce fruit-juice cans and removed the tops. From one can I removed the bottom and using masking tape, I taped the two cans together and covered them with colored adhesive-backed paper.

A FISH STORY

DEAR HELOISE:

I want to tell you a good way to save money if you own a fish tank and want to decorate it.

Instead of buying a scenery backing, just take some aluminum foil and tape it to the back of your fish tank.

You can either crumple it up or leave it smooth. I put some different colored tape on mine.

Debbie R.

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

Always keep some sunshine tucked away in your heart for a "down" day. Look on your family and friends as treasured jewels. Remember to say "I love you and I care about you" to those close to you.

Kathleen Plummer

QUICK BRUSH-UP

DEAR HELOISE:

I have the job of cleaning the bathrooms and after cleaning the toilet with the toilet brush, I lay the brush down on the rim. Then I bring down the seat to hold the brush in place.

Instead of having to carry a dripping wet brush across the floor to its container, it drips the water right into the toilet.

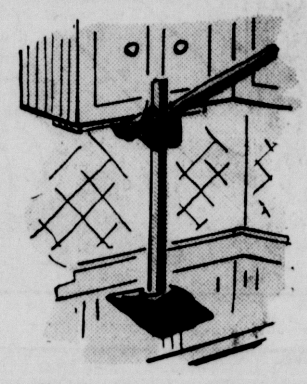
"I'M ALL RIGHT, JACK!"

DEAR HELOISE:

I would like to share my way of obtaining some very much needed extra help on a recent house-remodeling job. I am a young man who has never done any carpentry before.



All went along smoothly until it came to rehanging the kitchen cabinets. I found I needed some extra hands to balance the cabinets and to keep them tight against the walls and ceiling.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I had my daughter's picture taken and the "package" included two picture charms. I was told the general use was one for Mother's charm bracelet and the other for Daddy's key chain.

Well, the charm didn't fit Daddy's key chain and I didn't have a charm bracelet, but several months later I had my ears pierced and went earring-crazy.

So many people have commented on them, I thought I'd pass the idea on for mothers who have the charms or would like to include them the next time baby's picture is taken.

It's so simple to put the wire through the little hole on the charm. Be sure to squeeze the section together on the wires that hold the charm as an extra safety measure to avoid losing them.

DEAR HELOISE:

To make a different-looking cake, I laid a clean maple leaf on top of a frosted cake. I used a toothpick to trace the outline of the leaf, then carefully removed the leaf.

I went over the leaf outline in green frosting. Use yellow, orange or red frosting for fall colors. I filled in a few leaf veins too.

IT'S PUPPY LOVE!

DEAR HELOISE:

To make a coat sweater for a small dog, cut the arm off a sweater you no longer use.

See how long you need it to reach to the rear part of your pet. Measure up two inches from the ribbed end and cut two little holes about two and one-half inches apart.

Put the dog's head through the ribbed part and the legs through the two holes and you have a nice warm coat.

You and your dog will be happy.
